TAYLOR'S BODY FOUND IN POND AT MARLBORO

Mystery of Sergeant, Missing for Many Days, Partially Solved.

Special to the Boston American.

MARLBORO, May 15.—The body of Sergeant Guy Taylor of Company F, Eighth Regiment, who has been missing since a week ago Saturday, was found in Fort Meadow pond to-day by G. W. Campbell, a teamster. There were no marks about the body that indicated foul play and the authorities have not been able to determine the cause of death. An investigation is being made by the police and the medical examiner.

The point where the body was found is about halfway between Hudson and Marlboro. Campbell was hauling sand from a nearby pit when he noticed the body.

Taylor's disappearance caused great excitement in Marlboro, where he had lived for a number of years. Captain Frank Taylor of the militia company called out his men, and a systematic search was made for the body. They found the boat in which the sergeant had gone fishing, but not the slightest trace of the missing man.

It is said by friends of Taylor that there was no reason for his taking his own life. He leaves a widow and one child. Mrs. Taylor was prostrated when told the body of her husband had been found.

GROSS WASTE SHOWN IN LYNN DAM INQUIRY

Engineer Tells of Extravagant Expenditures on Walden Pond Work.

Special to the Boston American.

LYNN, May 15.—That there had been gross extravagance in the construction of the Walden Pond dam, which is being investigated by a commission appointed by Mayor Barney, was brought out at a hearing to-day when Lucien Taylor, a $25 a day engineer, admitted that he had allowed $230 a thousand feet for sheet tiling.

George H. Evans of Lowell, an engineer member of the commission, announced that he would produce an expert who would say that $80 was a large sum for such tiling.

There was spent by the Lynn Water Board, which superintended the construction of the dam, about $9,000 for sheet tiling. It is declared that the commission will show that $3,00 should have covered that part of the work.

Taylor also admitted that the Water Board accepted practically without question the prices charged by Contractor Frederick E. Shaw. The statements made considerable of a sensation at the hearing.

OIL SHARES WIN $9 A QUARTER

NEW YORK, May 15.—The Standard Oil Company to-day declared a dividend for the quarter of $9 a share. The previous dividend was $15 a share, and was paid March 15th last. The dividend declared for this time in 1905 was also $9 a share.

FOR TO-NIGHT'S "POP" CONCERT

Two more excellent programs have been prepared for the "Pop" concerts of to-night and to-morrow night. The one to-night includes the following: "Under the Double Eagle," J. F. Wagner; overture, "Fra Diavolo," Auber; selection, "Babes in Toyland," Herbert; overture, "Euryanthe," Weber; selection, "Erminie," Jakobowski; second rhapsody, Liszt; overture, "Light Cavalry," Suppe; march, "Vienna Dude," Von Blon.

LIBERTY THE KEYNOTE OF REPLY TO CZAR

ST. PETERSBURG, May 15 (3:50 P. M.).—The draft of the address to the throne in reply to the Emperor's speech at the opening of Parliament was submitted to the Lower House of Parliament to-day by the commission. It consists practically of the following demands:

General amnesty, the abolition of the death penalty, the suspenson of martial law and all exceptional laws, full civil liberty, the abolition of the council of the empire, the revision of the fundamental law, the establishment of the responsibility of ministers, the right of interpellation, force expropriation of land, guarantees of the rights of trades unions.

On Lines of Hughes Inquiry, House to Conduct
SHARP BRIBE PROBE

Able Lawyer, Possibly Herbert Parker, May Be Engaged to Manage It.

The investigation by the legislative committee on rules of bribery charges in connection with the defeat of the bucket shop bill by the House of Representatives is to be made along the lines of the famous Hughes insurance inquiry in New York, and with the same determined thoroughness.

One of the best criminal lawyers of the State will be secured to conduct the hearings. The name of former Attorney-General Herbert Parker was mentioned frequently to-day in the discussion of this phase of the case.

This declaration was made to-day by members of the investigating committee to a reporter of the BOSTON AMERICAN, and representatives who are not on the committee asserted that the program met with their hearty approval.

It is the plan of the Committee on Rules to have the lawyer do the probing and the committee to sit on the case as a jury. It is believed that the hearings will be semi-public—that is, that the newspapers will be permitted to have representatives present, but that the general public will be excluded.

Oppose Secret Hearings.

The sentiment as expressed among the legislators to-day was emphatically against a star chamber proceeding. The feeling seems to be that charges of bribery have become so frequent and so insistent that for once it is absolutely necessary to have the matter investigated in such an open and drastic manner that the people will be thoroughly satisfied with the result.

Anything that partakes of whitewashing, many of the members have pointed out, would serve to leave the situation in worse condition than it is at present.

The committee on rules meets this afternoon, but because of the fact that Speaker John N. Cole is kept at home with tonsilitis no action will be taken in connection with the bribery inquiry. The doctor has assured Mr. Cole that if he keeps in the house to-day he will be able to attend to business to-morrow, when it is expected the machinery will be started.

May Summon Lawson.

Two of the men who, it is said, will be called upon to tell all they know of bribery as witnesses are Thomas W. Lawson and George J. Raymond.

Following is the order adopted by the House calling for the investigation:

"Ordered, that the committee on rules be directed to investigate the charges of bribery recently made against members of the House of Representatives; and for this purpose the committee is authorized to administer oaths, to require the presence of witnesses and the production of documents and to employ such assistance as may be necessary."

Already the committee has heard Messrs. Swig, Thompson, Leonard, Gethro and Toland, the five members of the House who were summoned by District Attorney Moran last week before the general summons was sent to the entire Legislature.

SCENT MURDER IN LYNN DEATH

LYNN, May 15.—Mystery in the supposed suicide of Charles E. Meikle, who according to the statement of his fourteen-year-old son, Edgar, shot himself on November 7, 1905, has developed. District Attorney W. Scott Peters believes that he can show the man was murdered. An inquest will be held Saturday.

On the day of his death he went home from work at noon, and before he had time to eat his lunch a quarrel between father and son ended in the death of the elder Meikle.

SCHIDLOFSKI IS BETTER.

Schidlofski, the condemned murderer, whose mental and physical condition for two weeks has been such that the East Cambridge jail authorities despaired of his life, showed improvement yesterday, and for the first time in days asked for food.

8,000 TROLLEY MEN VOTING TO-DAY ON BIG STRIKE ISSUE

NATIONAL PRESIDENT MAHAN COMING TO TAKE CHARGE OF CONFLICT.

The employes of the Boston & Northern and Old Colony Street Railways are voting to-day whether they will go out on strike as a result of the refusal of President P. F. Sullivan to grant them a nine-hour day, a flat rate of 28 cents an hour and improvements in working conditions.

Clothed with full power to carry the controversy to a conclusion one way or the other, International President Mahon will reach Boston from Detroit in time for the general conference that is to take place here to-morrow.

Should the 8,000 men on the two roads decide to strike, President Mahon will instruct other street railways in New England as to working in unison with them, and the entire network of surface roads in this section may be tied up.

BROCKTON A UNIT FOR STRIKE.

The area affected by a strike on the Boston & Northern and Old Colony roads would stretch along the Atlantic coast from Newport to Newburyport and for many miles back in the country.

Coming at this time, when the shore and country resorts are opening for business, a tie-up of the surface roads would be disappointing to the travelling public and disastrous to the companies, who rely upon the Summer travel chiefly for their income.

At a meeting early to-day in Brockton which was attended by 300 men all but four voted to fight the position of President Sullivan. Delegates to attend the conference to-morrow were instructed to report that the Brockton men were unanimous in favor of the fight for their demands.

FALL RIVER BALLOTING.

At Fall River the voting began at 9 o'clock and will last until the same hour this evening. The greater portion of the men, it is said, are in favor of making a fight.

That the railway companies intend to make a bitter fight is indicated by the report that Farley, the strike-breaker who has figured so prominently in the West and in New York city, is here to assist the corporations.

If a strike is called it will be one of the largest and most comprehensive that ever occurred in street railway circles. The cities affected besides those mentioned will be Brockton, Taunton, Somerville, Chelsea, Melrose, Lynn, Salem, Beverly, Gloucester, Lawrence and Lowell.

Farley is reported as saying that he will settle the strike talk. With him came his

40 ENTOMBED, 16 HURT; MINE GAS EXPLODES

Fire Boss Among Those Mortally Injured—Pennsylvania Colliery Accident.

SHENANDOAH, Pa., May 15.—By an explosion of gas to-day at Shenandoah City colliery of the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Company forty miners were entombed and sixteen more or less hurt, several of them fatally, it is thought.

Black damp is interfering with the work of rescue.

Five of the injured have been taken from the mine, among them being Fire Boss Samuel Powell, who is so badly burned that he will probably die. Several hundred men, women and children are pressing about the mouth of the shaft anxious as to the fate of their loved ones.

WIFE DIVORCES RICH BOSTON MAN IN LONDON

Separation Granted Mrs. Benjamin M. Chandler by English Courts.

The romance which resulted in the marriage of Benjamin Martin Chandler and his wife, Eloise, several years ago, both of whom are well known in Boston and Manchester, N. H., was to-day ended in a London divorce court, according to dispatches from that city to the BOSTON AMERICAN. Both came from New Hampshire, Chandler being a son of the late George Byron Chandler, the millionaire banker of Manchester. He inherited considerable wealth from his father. He was well educated, having studied at Dartmouth and Harvard. After the marriage the couple came to Boston to live, and then moved to England, where Chandler was engaged in literary research. The divorce was granted to the wife on the ground of desertion.

Eitel Fritz, Second Son of Kaiser, Said in London Dispatch to Have Died at Potsdam—Was Married Only a Few Months Ago.

Special Cable to Boston American.

LONDON, May 15.—A rumor has reached here from Berlin that Prince Eitel Fritz, the second son of the Emperor of Germany, is dead at Potsdam.

There are conflicting reports as to how he came to his death. One report is that he died of apoplexy, another as the result of an automobile accident, and a third that he committed suicide.

It is known that the Prince has been seriously ill at times with what was said to be inflammation of the lungs. It is the general belief here that if he is dead his weakness in this respect caused it.

Handsome Couple.

Prince Eitel Fritz of Prussia was the second son of the German Emperor. He was twenty-three years old.

Amid royal splendor he was wedded on February 27 to Duchess Sophia Charlotte of Oldenburg. It was said that they were the handsomest royal couple to be married in many a day. His bride was four years his senior.

The Prince was very tall, standing over six feet, and in stature, cast of features and manner recalled the old Emperor William.

Earlier in the year the Prince was reported as very ill at Potsdam with inflammation of the lungs.

At the time of the royal wedding the following was written about the occasion and the couple married:

Duchess Sophie Charlotte, who is a tall, blonde, graceful girl of twenty-seven, five years older than her royal bridegroom, arrived in the city shortly before noon, accompanied by her father, the reigning Grand Duke Augustus of Oldenburg, and her stepmother, the Grand Duchess Elizabeth of Mecklenburg.

After the customary ceremonial reception at the railway station at which the German Emperor and the members of the imperial family, except the Empress, were present, Duchess Sophie Charlotte proceeded to Bellevue Castle on the northwestern outskirts of the city. Here she rested for a few hours before making her public entry into the city.

STATE ENTRY TO BERLIN.

The State entry into Berlin was made in the famous gilded coach constructed by Frederick the Great, which was drawn by eight jet black horses. Duchess Sophie Charlotte was plainly visible through the broad windows of the coach.

Princess Frederick Carl of Prussia, the oldest member of the Hohenzollern family, accompanied the bride-to-be in the coach. Half a squadron of cavalry guards rode in front of the coach and a half squadron rode behind. Five six-horsed carriages conveyed the noblemen and ladies in attendance on the royal coach. The procession was headed by a squadron of dragoon guards, and a squadron of lancers with flying pennons brought up the rear.

As the royal coach passed through the Brandenburg gate an artillery salute of forty-eight guns was fired, and the bells of all the churches in Berlin pealed forth a welcome. The Burgomaster of Berlin presented an address of welcome, to which the Duchess replied.

MAYOR HOLDS VETO CLUB OVER THE ALDERMEN

Mayor Fitzgerald will veto the $500,000 loan for street construction, which has been passed by both branches of the City Council, and is now in his hands for approval, unless the action of the Board of Aldermen yesterday in defeating the $500,000 loan for street improvements is reconsidered at the coming meeting of the board.

The loan for street construction goes, if approved, to the Street Commissioners, and is handled by them, and over the money the Mayor has no control except that he approves the action of the Board of Commissioners.

That the loan will find executive displeasure is officially stated at the Mayor's office to-day. It is declared that the action of the Common Council at its last meeting in passing the two loans, one for street improvements and one for street construction, was the result of a trade between the Mayor and two Republican members of the Board of Aldermen. The Republican members agreed to pass the loan for street improvements, which the Mayor especially desired, if the Mayor would withdraw his opposition to the loan for an equal amount for street construction, which the Aldermen had already passed.

Yesterday the two Republican aldermen had an opportunity to make good their part of the bargain, but instead of so doing they voted against the improvement loan, and it was defeated.

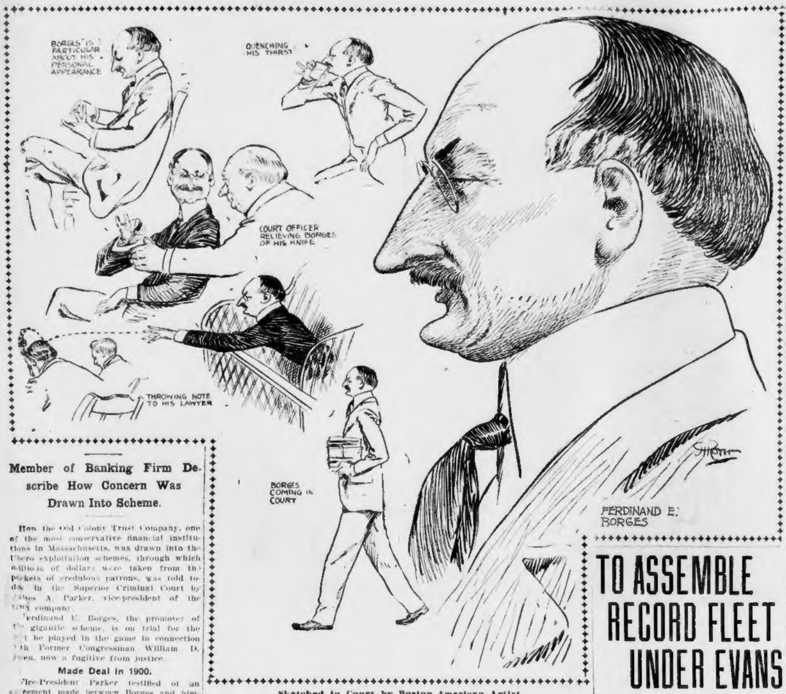
ARMED POSSE IN MAN HUNT IN GEORGIA

ATLANTA, Ga., May 15.—J. H. Clark, night telegraph operator at Chamblee, twelve miles from Atlanta, went crazy through love for a girl while on duty last night, armed himself and went out on the rampage. He killed William J. Cheeks of Dunwoody and seriously injured W. Purcell of Chamblee, E. S. Purcell of Chamblee, W. S. Mast of Chamblee and W. J. Coker of Dunwoody. He is heavily armed with two revolvers, a rifle and 250 rounds of ammunition. He is still at large and is being pursued by a large armed posse.

All business has been suspended in that little place, homes closed up and the inhabitants living in mortal terror. Last night Clark took a can of oil and set fire to the home of the Purcells. When they came out to fight the flames he fired upon them, wounding them both and W. S. Mast, a neighbor who came to help fight the fire. He continued to Dunwoody where he tried to buy some ammunition from Nash and Cheeks, and when he was refused pulled his pistol and killed W. J. Cheeks and fired at Nash, but the bullet struck his Masonic fob and saved his life.

W. J. Coker was shot at Dunwoody too, but not badly hurt. An armed posse has left Atlanta to capture the maniac, dead or alive.

OLD COLONY TRUST CO.'S UBERO DEALS TOLD AT TRIAL OF PROMOTER BORGES



BORGES' PARTICULAR ABOUT HIS PERSONAL APPEARANCE

THROWING NOTE TO HIS LAWYER
BORGES COMING IN COURT
FERDINAND E. BORGES

Sketched in Court by Boston American Artist.

SOME VIEWS OF F. E. BORGES OF UBERO CO.

Member of Banking Firm Describe How Concern Was Drawn Into Scheme.

How the Old Colony Trust Company, one of the most conservative financial institutions in Massachusetts, was drawn into the Ubero exploitation schemes, through which millions of dollars were taken from the pockets of credulous patrons, was told to-day in the Superior Criminal Court by Charles A. Parker, vice-president of the trust company.

Ferdinand E. Borges, the promoter of the gigantic scheme, is on trial for the part he played in the game in connection with Former Congressman William D. Owen, now a fugitive from justice.

Made Deal in 1900.

Vice-President Parker testified of an agreement made between Borges and himself in October, 1900, by which the trust company should take the title, as trustee, to the lands in Mexico owned by the La Puerta Plantations Company.

An agreement was deposited with the Old Colony Trust Company, Mr. Parker said, prepared and executed in behalf of the Ubero Plantations Company, by which the La Puerta Plantations Company undertook to convey and contracted to develop the Mexican land, and for which the Ubero Plantations Company agreed to pay in annual payments covering five years, $750,000. This deed, Mr. Parker said, was delivered and recorded by the trust company in Mexico.

The agreement between Owen in behalf of the La Puerta Plantation Company and Borges in behalf of the Ubero, read in court, described the plantation property as bearing a million pine apple trees and a million rubber plants, and being especially adapted to the raising of oranges, grape fruit and other tropical fruit. Outside of the description of the property in the agreement, Mr. Parker said he had no knowledge of the value of the plantation land.

Attorney Chase for the prosecution read voluminous correspondence between Borges and Vice-President Parker of the Old Colony Trust Company, in which the latter strongly objected to what he termed misleading matter in which the Ubero people were advertising the trust company's relations with their enterprise and warned Borges against advertising the trust company in any but its true relation to the Ubero Plantations Company—that of registrar of its stock.

Parker Made Objection.

Vice President Parker particularly objected to the Ubero company's advertisement, which stated that "every certificate insures a pro rata interest in the land held by the Old Colony Trust Company as trustee," and further "the holding of the deed to these 30,000 acres by the Old Colony Trust Company precludes the mortgaging or encumbering of the land in any way," and wrote Borges that the Old Colony Trust Company's relations with the Ubero company "in no way refers to the title of land, the quality of it or anything beyond the agreement by which the deed was lodged with the trust company."

"That was one on me. We all smoke," was Mr. Borges excuse in a letter to Mr. Parker for the insertion of an advertisement of the Ubero Company, in which the name of the Old Colony Trust Company was used in violation of a previous agreement that no such advertisement should be run without being first submitted to Mr. Parker, and Mr. Chase asked: "Did you smoke, Mr. Parker?" The banker only smiled in reply.

One letter of Mr. Parker's read in court accused Borges of "a distinct breach of faith with the trust company in advertising its connection with the Ubero Company.

Essence of the Charges.

The charge against Borges is that he, with William D. Owen, a former Congressman from Indiana and now a fugitive from justice, sold stock in the plantation concern on the alleged representation that certain lands in Central America and Mexico had been converted into flourishing rubber and coffee plantations, yielding great financial returns. It is alleged that these representations were not truthful and that the money thus secured was wrongfully converted. He was brought to trial yesterday afternoon.

His first act, at that time, as he sat viewing the jury, was to take out a small penknife and begin trimming his nails. As soon as the court officer saw the knife it was confiscated, and Borges gave up his manicure work with an unconcerned look. Next, while taking notes, he wrote one to his counsel, rolled it into a ball and threw it across the intervening space with an accuracy that landed it properly, but brought forth a caution from the court officer, which cut short further wireless communications.

Bait of 400 Per Cent.

Among the communications shown the court was one which Borges wrote telling that the company had prospective investments which will "repay 400 per cent." Several of the letters were marked "Confidential." Senator Herbert L. Baker, counsel for Borges, objected to the reading of these letters, but was not sustained. A letter to H. C. Estee of Sterling, Ill., dated July 11, 1900, from Borges, read thus:

"Boston as a field for operations is probably the best in the country. One-fifteenth of all the savings of the American people is deposited in Massachusetts and co-operative banks. A very large per cent. of population are women, and women who are self-reliant and who have been educated to transact business and make investments for themselves on their own judgment. Boston has the reputation of being the greatest centre for investments of all kinds that bear on their face any reasonable chance of profit."

SUPREME COURT DEALS BLOW AT AUTO OWNERS

PROPRIETORS OF MACHINES RESPONSIBLE FOR CHAUFFEURS' OVERSPEEDING.

Automobile owners are hard hit by a decision of the Supreme Court handed down to-day, the court holding that owners of autos are liable if while riding they allow their chauffeur to exceed the speed limit. The decision is the result of a test case brought by Lawyer Roland H. Sherman, ex-District Attorney of Essex county and son of Judge Sherman. Mr. Sherman was arrested for exceeding the speed limit at Leicester last year. In the municipal court he was fined $15 and carried his case to the Superior Court, where a jury found him guilty of overspeeding. Sherman's appeal to the Supreme Court was based on the fact that although he was owner of the machine he was not operating it, and therefore not liable.

The Court holds that the registering of the machine by the defendant with the Massachusetts Highway Commission warranted the jury finding that Mr. Sherman was "general owner of the machine and had a special property therein which gave him control thereof."

The decision says: "If the defendant is guilty, he is guilty not as owner, but because the evidence warranted the jury in finding as a fact that he participated in the machine's being run at an illegal speed.

"The offence is a misdemeanor, and it is settled that in misdemeanors there are no degrees, but that all who participate in the commission of the offence are principals, and may be charged as such."

8,000 RAILWAY MEN VOTING ON STRIKE

bureau of publicity and his guards. Last night he conferred with the railroad officials, and some of his men tried to gain access to the secret meetings of the locals, but they all failed.

All over the district covered by the two street railway companies secret meetings were held by the men last night, preparatory to instructing the general conference to be held to-morrow as to whether a strike shall be called. Until that meeting is held no action will be taken. If the strike is called it will involve not only the motormen and conductors, but the linemen and trackmen as well.

Strike is Sanctioned.

The general executive board of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electrical Railway Employes has sanctioned in advance a general strike on all divisions of the Boston & Northern and Old Colony. In ordering a strike under this sanction the constitution provides that the request for different conditions, if desired, shall be followed by a demand. If this is likewise refused it becomes necessary for the railway employes to request that the matter be submitted to arbitration, and it is only after this has been refused by the employers that the local unions are empowered to make use of the sanction to strike.

At Lowell there were two meetings last night. A secret ballot was cast and the announcement of the decision will be made at the same time as the delegates to the conference in this city to-morrow are elected. It is believed that the majority of the Lowell men do not favor a strike, but want recognition of their union.

The Lynn men held meeting after midnight, but the action taken has not been made public. At the Sunday meeting it was voted that the men should stick to the demand made in the request to President Sullivan, and it is believed that this action will be adhered to. The Lynn division is one of the largest on the Boston & Northern and there were 600 men present at the meeting. Lawrence has also voted to stand by the demand.

The meeting at Quincy last night was at eleven o'clock adjourned to to-day, and will be continued all day to give all the men an opportunity to vote. The polls will be open all day also at Gloucester.

BROCKTON STANDS OR FALLS WITH THE CONFERENCE BOARD

BROCKTON, May 15.—A decision was reached early to-day by the 300 employes of the Boston & Northern and Old Colony Railways of this division to stand firmly by the demands as outlined in the agreement formulated by the conference committee.

The delegates to the conference were instructed to report the stand, practically unanimous, on the part of the Brockton division members and to lay the whole matter in the hands of the conference committee and the international officers in Boston to-morrow.

The Brockton meeting convened at 12:30 a. m. Special cars brought members from North Abington, Lakeville and Milton car houses until A. O. U. W. Hall, the regular meeting place, was packed beyond all limits, and an adjournment to Franklin Hall, the largest meeting place in Campello, became necessary.

Brockton Jurisdiction.

The Brockton division has jurisdiction over all lines of the Old Colony system in Brockton, the through line to Boston by way of Avon, Randolph and Milton to Mattapan square connecting with the elevated, the line in East Milton, the lines to Stoughton and North Easton, the short line to Taunton, connecting for Providence, Fall River and Newport, the through line to New Bedford, passing through West Bridgewater, Middleboro, Tremont, etc., the lines connecting Brockton and Whitman, the Abingtons and Rockland, the country line between Rockland, the Abingtons and Whitman through East Bridgewater to Bridgewater and the line through Rockland as far as Queen Ann's Corner on the Nantasket Beach route.

In Quincy Division.

At Mattapan square the Hyde Park division takes jurisdiction. The Quincy division takes jurisdiction on the Neponset line from Boston, running into Brockton by way of Holbrook and the Braintrees. The Taunton division takes jurisdiction at the end of the Brockton short line into Taunton and over the long line to Bridgewater, which also connects for Brockton. The Quincy division takes jurisdiction where the Brockton division's scope ends in Rockland and at Queen Ann's Corner, on the Nantasket route, and the Quincy union covers the various lines through the Weymouths which run into Rockland.

Practically all the regular men and many spare men on the lines governed by Brockton division are members of the union. Of those who were not thirty-two fell into line at to-day's session and were initiated.

ITS THIRD MAY DANCE.

The Charitable Entertaining Club will give its third annual May party and dance at Howe Hall, No. 177 Huntington avenue, to-night.

TO ASSEMBLE RECORD FLEET UNDER EVANS

Atlantic Squadron Will Aggregate 276,000 Tons in 30 Days.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, May 15.—Within the next thirty days the Atlantic fleet of warships under the command of Rear Admiral Evans will exceed the fighting strength of any two regular fleets of Great Britain and France. The first-class battleships Rhode Island and Virginia recently placed in commission will be turned over to "Fighting Bob" within the next few days, and early next month the biggest type of battleships ever constructed for the American navy, the Connecticut and Louisiana, will be commissioned and take their place in Admiral Evans's line.

The fighting strength will be augmented later in the season by the battleship New Jersey, a sister to the Rhode Island, the Washington and Tennessee, the last two over 8,000 tons each, bigger than the peerless West Virginia class now at anchor in the North River.

With such an immense fleet it is natural that Admiral Evans should abandon the Maine as a flagship, and the Connecticut, the product of the navy yard in Brooklyn, will fly the broad pennant of "Fighting Bob."

The fleet of the admiral, aside from the torpedo flotilla auxiliaries and ten unprotected cruisers and gunboats, will by Summer time include the following vessels, the assembling of which is unparalleled in American navy lore.

Battleships, first class—Connecticut, Louisiana, Maine, Missouri, Kearsarge, Kentucky, Rhode Island, Virginia, New Jersey, Alabama, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa and Massachusetts, representing 193,000 tons.

Armored cruisers—Tennessee, Washington, West Virginia, Colorado, Maryland and Pennsylvania—83,000 tons.

This, too, in excess of such well-known fighting craft as the Columbia, Minneapolis, Cleveland, Denver, Des Moines, Newport, Nashville, Dubuque, Paducah, Don Juan de Austria, all of which are attached to the Atlantic fleet.

MARLOWE ILL; KNIFE FEARED

OTTAWA, Ont., May 15.—Julia Marlowe was taken suddenly ill here last night and hurried back to New York, leaving at 5 p. m.

The Russell Theatre was crowded, and it was announced from the platform that the audience could remain until after the first act and then ask for the return of their ticket money if they desired. All remained throughout, however.

It is feared that the sudden illness may prove to be appendicitis and that the actress was hurried to New York for an operation.

CAUGHT LITTLE FISH SUNDAY; FINED $20

BENNINGTON, Vt., May 15.—Hester A. Moon of Pownal went fishing Sunday and was caught with two trout of less than the legal length in his possession. He pleaded guilty in the Municipal Court yesterday and was fined $20 and costs.

LEGISLATURE.

FIGHT FISHING VETO.

To-day the voto of the bill to allow boating and fishing on the great ponds of the metropolitan water district is the star feature of the calendar, with Representative McManus of Natick leading the fight against it.

HOUSE VOTES TWO WAYS.

After voting overwhelmingly with their mouths against the Luce corrupt practices bill yesterday afternoon, the House members on the roll call adopted the bill by the vote of 141 to 26. It was another case of the moral courage (?) of the membership. They did not want the bill, but they dare not say so when put on record.

SENATE REVIVING BILLS.

The Senate is "turning turtle" on nearly every matter that comes before it. Beginning with the overtime bill, it reconsidered the passage of several matters and killed them. Recently the Senators have taken the other tack and are reviving bills that were rejected, such as the college taxation bill and the bill allowing gas companies to increase capital stock $400,000 above the limit.

ALL SORTS.

TO RELEASE HUB SCHOONER.

NORTH SYDNEY, N. S., May 15.—In accordance with instructions from Ottawa, the Boston fishing schooner Raylah is to be released immediately upon her owners furnishing bonds, awaiting the decision of the court. No instructions have yet been sent here regarding the Parthia.

RESPITE FOR PATRICK.

ALBANY, N. Y., May 15.—Governor Higgins yesterday granted an additional respite of thirty days, until June 17, to Albert T. Patrick, under sentence of death for the murder of William M. Rice.

HUMMEL MUST STAND TRIAL.

NEW YORK, May 15.—Judge Scott yesterday denied the motion of Lawyer Abraham Hummel's counsel to quash the two indictments, charging subornation of perjury in the Dodge-Morse divorce case, and Hummel must stand trial.

CAUGHT 80 POUNDS TROUT.

BURLINGTON, Vt., May 15.—The fishing season opened yesterday at the Lake Mansfield Trout Club, fifteen men caught eighty pounds of trout.

LABOR.

10 PER CENT. RAISE IN MILLS

MRS. BEMIS GOT POISON YEAR HER HUSBAND DIED

Mistress of "Mystery Farm" Bought Arsenic and Morphine in 1904, and Investigation Shows Records of Other Purchases of Poisonous Drugs.

BARRE, May 15.—An investigation made by reporters of the BOSTON AMERICAN to-day revealed the fact that Mrs. Myra A. Bemis, who was arrested on the charge of having killed John Hammond, a hand employed on her farm, bought poison on two different occasions from Fred R. Anderson, a druggist in this city, who holds the poison records.

This poison was purchased in 1904, when her husband was ill and died under circumstances which in the light of Hammond's death have led to talk of exhuming his body.

On April 11, 1904, Anderson sold to Mrs. Bemis a quantity of Fowler's solution of arsenic. This is a dilution of the poison and may be taken as a medicine in small quantities. If administered in large quantities it would cause death.

SOLD HER MORPHINE TABLETS.

On August 20, of the same year, Anderson sold to Mrs. Bemis twenty-five morphine tablets. When she was asked what she wanted the poison for, Anderson said, she replied that she wanted it for sickness at home and because she was in the habit of keeping morphine in the house.

Here are other records of the woman now under arrest having bought poison.

On November 24, three days before Hammond died, from Brewer & Co., Front street, Worcester, a large quantity of morphine tablets.

Last July, from Harding Jenkins, a druggist in Barre Centre, a quantity of strychnine, which the woman said she wanted for poisoning crows.

CONVERTED TO AGNOSTICISM.

It was learned to-day that Mrs. Elvira Gibson, an agnostic and personal friend of Robert G. Ingersoll, died at the home of Mrs. Bemis on May 5, 1901, having left Mrs. Bemis several hundred dollars. It is said that Mrs. Gibson converted Mrs. Bemis to her belief. There was nothing suspicious about the woman's death.

When Mrs. Bemis appears before the Grand Jury at Worcester to-morrow, the State will allege that she always kept morphine about the premises and that she gave several doses to Hammond. The State will assert that when she and Hammond had come to an understanding about his money she began to give him morphine, being sick at that time.

MYSTERY IN POISONS.

It will be further charged that she thereafter quietly administered enough doses of morphine to Hammond to insure his making good the agreement, which gave her his bank account only in case he should die from the sickness.

It is believed that H. D. Brewer, senior member of the Worcester drug firm of Brewer & Co., will be one of the most important witnesses for the government. Mr. Brewer has been summoned to appear before the Grand Jury to-morrow.

Upon his evidence the government will lay considerable stress. For several years Brewer & Co. have manufactured for Mrs. Bemis horse liniment and condition powders. Both remedies are said to contain morphine and other deadly drugs. Mrs. Bemis has for a considerable length of time purchased various poisons from this firm. Bert P. Anderson, who has sold Mrs. Bemis poison, formerly worked for Brewer & Co., and was connected with the laboratory department. While in this position, Mr. Anderson put up a large quantity of horse liniment for Mrs. Bemis. The police have taken from "Mystery Farm" a bottle of this horse liniment.

Just what part it is to play in the case the police refuse to say. It is believed, however, that it will form a more important part than its name might imply. Other bottles containing fluid have been taken from the house, but the police will not say what they are.

MORE POISON FOUND.

More poison has been secured by the police. Chief of Police Fitzgerald of Ware, in a secret visit to the home of Mrs. Minnie Sargent, sister of Mrs. Bemis, procured a bottle in which were about twenty-five morphine pills. This is about one-quarter of the original number contained in the phial.

Chief Fitzgerald was instructed to declare to Mrs. Sargent that he knew the pills were there, that he also knew when they came into her possession, and also to make it plain that it was well known to the police that the pills were given to her recently by Mrs. Bemis.

The pills were given up without controversy, Mrs. Sargent also admitting that the police were right in their supposition that she procured them from her sister.

"Not one of those pills ever went to John Hammond," declared Mrs. Sargent. "If that is what they have got against my sister it can be easily explained when I am called upon to tell what I know."

MANY WITNESSES SOUGHT.

District Attorney Taft has summoned a large number of witnesses to appear before the Grand Jury on Wednesday, both Ware and Barre being scoured for everybody who knows or might know anything about the matter. Deputy Daniel H. Rice of Ware was to-night given over a dozen summonses for as many different persons in that town.

Among those who will appear before the Grand Jury for the government are: Professor Whitney of Harvard, State Detectives Peleg F. Murray and Robert Molt, Deputy Sheriff Daniel Rice of Barre, Dr. W. E. Chamberlain, medical examiner, of Rutland; Chairman W. R. Spooner of the Barre Board of Health, T. H. Spooner, the undertaker who cared for Hammond's burial; Bertie Bemis, the sixteen-year-old son of Mrs. Bemis; Patrick Flynn, the foreman of "Mystery Farm"; Robert Greenwood, the seventy-four-year-old boarder, who has given Mrs. Bemis $800 to keep him for life, and David Hammond, the cousin of John Hammond, who started the case by employing Attorney John F. Hurley of Boston to investigate Hammond's death.

It has been intimated by the police that many sensations will be sprung at the trial. It is believed that Professor Whitney has found another poison in Hammond's stomach besides morphine. This may account for the police seizing the bottle of horse liniment.

Mrs. Bemis feels that an injustice has been done her by causing her arrest before the Grand Jury had received the evidence.

CRIES INJUSTICE.

"Arresting me before the Grand Jury had heard the evidence will prejudice the case," she said in the Summer street jail yesterday. "I believe there should be a law whereby a person should be given a hearing, at least, before being locked up.

"I am not allowed to have any of my witnesses before the Grand Jury. The evidence is all one-sided."

Mrs. Bemis does not care to read the newspaper reports regarding her case. She has asked for magazines, but says she does not care what the newspapers are printing. She was visited yesterday at the jail by Patrick Flynn, her foreman. Mrs. Bemis did not speak once of the charge against her. Her only thoughts are of her aged mother and the farm. She was told by Flynn that her son Bertie had been summoned before the Grand Jury, and she told Flynn to purchase a new suit for the boy so that he would make a good appearance. She gave her foreman various instructions regarding work at the farm.

She dealt principally on several incubators which are hatching chicks. The Grand Jury will decide her case to-morrow, and the woman should know whether or not she must stand trial by next Saturday. She eats very little prison fare. Several friends have sent food to her. She has sent out several times herself, and Attorney Thomas H. Sullivan carried a substantial meal to her yesterday noon.

SHE USED HAMMOND WELL, SAYS FLYNN

WORCESTER, May 15.—Patrick Flynn, foreman for Mrs. Myra Bemis of the "Mystery Farm" at Barre Plains, was seen yesterday after he had visited her at the jail here. Flynn was strong in his praise of the woman, and equally strong in the assertion that if she had bought morphine she would not give it to John Hammond any more than she would give him whiskey.

Flynn says Hammond frequently had liquor about the farm, although not with Mrs. Bemis's knowledge. He was quite sure Mrs. Bemis did not buy the morphine tablets for him, as she probably wouldn't have them around any more than she would whiskey. He says Mrs. Bemis's treatment of Hammond was very kind, and that he was privileged to hitch up any of the horses in the barn and drive anywhere he pleased; in fact, he had more privileges than himself.

HAMMOND WAS RAVING.

Coming down to the incidents of Hammond's sickness and death, he said: "John was taken sick on Tuesday. He wasn't well when he went out to milk that night. In fact, we had to milk the cows after him. He went to bed, and he was worse the next day. I told Mrs. Bemis about it and suggested that she call a doctor. She sent for Dr. Bixby and he came that day, Wednesday. On Thursday Hammond was raving, but quieted down after the doctor left him. Friday, Saturday and Sunday he was in a sort of comatose condition. Monday noon he was breathing heavily, and he died at 1 o'clock that day."

"Did he ever speak of his brother and sister before or during his illness?"

"No, he never did. I doubt if they are his brother and sister. He told me he had no relatives except a mother in the old country. He used to speak about her, but said she was well cared for.

"Mrs. Bemis," added Flynn, "is a large woman, weighing at least 220 pounds, but her features are small. She wears but a 6 glove and only a 6 shoe. She has the glow of health and is strong and robust. She is a Christian, though but occasionally going to church. Her disposition is jolly and she has humor on occasions.

SHE WORE OVERALLS.

"Because she is a practical farm woman, wears overalls and does a man's work when necessary, some of the people about town have chosen to call her 'eccentric' and 'crazy.' She may be a little odd, but is the sanest woman in this town, and as sharp and bright as they make 'em.

"She rises every morning at 5 o'clock, dons her stable clothes and milks a half dozen cows or more. I have known her, when rushed, to milk 20 cows in a morning.

"She can run a horse rake, and can any time be seen working about her fields, and she can plough, too, when called upon.

"Every other day she hitches up and drives three miles to Barre Centre, there to do the marketing and such like.

"Perhaps she is not over popular there, but that doesn't trouble her. She pays her bills and cares nothing for gossip.

"She attends to all the housework and does all the cooking. Her work is the equal of that of any three men on the place.

"Mrs. Bemis manages her farm, the pride of the village, with a stern but knowing hand. She is forty-eight years old and was raised at Newport, Vt. She came here twenty years ago and is known for miles around."

SUSTAIN VETO ON FISHING BILL

The House to-day sustained Governor Guild's veto of the bill to permit boating and fishing on the great ponds under the control of the Metropolitan Water and Sewerage Board. The vote was 150 to 10.

On the question of passing the measure over the Governor's objection Representative McManus said that the veto was based on the old bogy of typhoid fever. He said the Governor took the word of three men of the Metropolitan board, who were neglectful of duty and permitted water to be defiled because they had not the moral courage to stand up against wealthy men and corporations. He said there was discrimination shown by the board in granting permits, and that it was against poor men. Representative Lothrop of Newton spoke in favor of sustaining the veto.

FELL OUT OF BED, BROKE COLLARBONE

Daniel Sheehan, who is thirty years old and lives at No. 30 Wall street, East Cambridge, walked into the Relief Hospital early to-day and complained of a lame neck and shoulder, which pained him greatly. The doctors found that he had a broken collarbone. Sheehan told the doctor he awoke suddenly last night with a bump and found himself standing on his ear at the bedside.

"MERIT ONLY IN ELLIS CASE"

That his appointment of Mr. Ellis to the Annapolis Naval Academy was not in any way a favor to Louis A. Frothingham, who was Republican candidate for Mayor against the present chief executive, is the statement issued by Congressman John A. Keliher in reply to the article in Mayor Fitzgerald's paper saying that he was appointing friends of the former candidate to office.

"Upon the results of the examination," says the Congressman, "I named Mr. Ellis, whose marks were highest."

MAY LOSE AN EYE FROM FIRE SCORCH

Sergeant Albert Chaplan of the Metropolitan Park Police was badly burned about the face and head yesterday in a brush fire which he was fighting. A resident near the park at Newton Lower Falls had set a fire, and it got away from him. Chaplan and another man were fighting it, and before the former knew it he was surrounded by the flames. It is feared he may lose the sight of his right eye.

ROOSEVELT'S ANSWER IS REGARDED A CONFESSION

The Issue on Which the Bitter Fight Between Roosevelt and Chandler and Tillman Arose

UPON the difference in effect between these two amendments, defining the scope of court review in the Rate Bill, arose the controversy between President Roosevelt, on the one side, and Senator Tillman and ex-Senator Chandler, on the other:

THE ALLISON AMENDMENT.

"The venue of suits brought in any of the circuit courts of the United States against the Interstate Commerce Commission to enjoin, set aside, annul, or suspend any order or requirement of the commission shall be in the district where the carrier, against whom such order or requirement may have been made, has its principal operating office, and jurisdiction to hear and determine such suits is hereby vested in such courts."

THE MOODY AMENDMENT.

"Jurisdiction is hereby conferred on the circuit courts of the United States to hear and determine in any such suit whether the order complained of was beyond the authority of the commission or in violation of the rights of the carrier secured by the constitution; and if, upon the hearing, the court shall find that the order complained of was beyond the authority of the commission or in violation of the rights of the carrier secured by the constitution, it shall enjoin the enforcement of the same."

Ignores Main Points in Tillman Statement Which Caused the Chandler Controversy.

Weak Reply on Rate Bill Expected to Fan Flame Still Further.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—The sensational rate bill incident, in which serious questions of veracity have arisen between President Roosevelt and former Senator William E. Chandler, is now in its second chapter. In a long letter addressed to Senator Allison, given out last night from the White House, President Roosevelt admits that much that Senator Tillman told the Senate on Saturday about the President's conferences with the Democrats is true.

The President ignores two of the most important charges made against him, however. He does not reply to the assertion of Mr. Chandler that he told him he did not trust Senators Foraker, Knox and Spooner, who were seeking to injure and defeat the bill by ingenious constitutional arguments. He seems willing to leave this question upon Senator Lodge's statement that this is a "deliberate and unqualified falsehood."

Nor does he in any manner explain his conduct in entering upon negotiation with the Democrats and then deserting them at a time these negotiations had progressed so far that his Attorney-General had given to the Democratic representatives the draft of an amendment on which they hoped to combine twenty-six Democrats and twenty Republicans.

Makes Admissions.

The President admits he participated in the conferences through Attorney Moody, but says he did so at the request of Mr. Chandler. He does not assert that he notified the Democrats before accepting the Allison amendment. He merely dropped them because he had heard Senator Bailey was of the opinion no agreement would muster the needed votes, and other Democrats told him it would be better to pass the Hepburn bill.

Mr. Roosevelt's statement is long, and he goes into the technique of rate legislation, which is becoming tiresome. He appears to have favored almost every amendment that was brought to him, except those providing for a broad review, and he even said he favored "the Spooner amendment." He confesses that he conferred with practically everybody.

But the President is quite certain that he made no hard and fast agreement with Senators Tillman and Bailey to test the temper of the Senate upon the compromise amendment by going to a vote. He insists that he was not committed to any amendment or set of amendments. On this he trusts for justification for abandoning his allies without notice.

Moody to the Rescue.

The agreement Mr. Roosevelt seems to have understood to have been made might be termed "an experimental alliance." When he thought the experiment would not work he turned to the Allison amendment. In no case, he says, was there the slightest opportunity for any "honest misconception" of his attitude or any belief that he had pledged himself specifically to any particular programme.

Attorney-General Moody comes to the rescue of his chief with the intense loyalty which has marked his course ever since he became Attorney-General. He owns to holding many conferences with Senators Bailey and Tillman. He admits he drafted an amendment embodying his views of the sort of provision which should go into the bill, limiting the court review and preventing the courts from suspending the rate pending a hearing.

The statement comprised two letters, one from the President to Senator Allison and the other from Attorney-General Moody to the President, both dated yesterday.

Chandler Was Go-Between.

The President is dumb on the charge that he denounced Senators Knox, Spooner and Foraker as plotting enemies of the real rate bill. It was on this assertion by Mr. Chandler that the latter was called a wilful liar by Mr. Roosevelt.

Mr. Roosevelt admits that Mr. Chandler WAS his accredited "go-between" in the White House negotiations with the Democrats, but asserts that Mr. Chandler came to him as the envoy of Mr. Tillman and was not sent for by the White House.

Senator Tillman denies this flatly.

On his return to his apartments at the Colonial Hotel, Senator Tillman said, regarding the insinuation of the President that he, Tillman, had sent Chandler to see the President:

"That I sent Senator Chandler to see the President cannot be denied too emphatically. I did not send him, nor even suggest to him that he see the President as my intermediary."

At the conference at Senator Bailey's home last night the President's statement, and Attorney-General Moody's letter were gone over in all their phrases. It was declared that the President's statement, so far as his charge against Senator Chandler is concerned, is a plea of confession and avoidance, and that his explanation of his position on the Rate bill is sufficient in itself to show that he has been guilty of double dealing with the Democrats.

Senator Tillman read the President's statement fully without comment, and then said:

"I should be willing to submit the case to the public on these exhibits. I cannot see what the President is driving at."

DR. CRAPSEY IS GUILTY OF HERESY; SUSPENSION

Vote of Court Was Four to One Against New York Episcopal Rector.

Crapsey Teachings Which Caused Heresy Trial

Jesus was born of parents of the middle class.

He was born of a simple father and mother.

The fact that early Christians predicated a miraculous birth to Jesus was to be regarded as one of the greatest misfortunes that had ever befallen mankind.—Declarations of Dr. Crapsey that are declared heretical.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., May 15.—Chancellor Sheldon S. Brown of the Episcopal Diocese of Western New York to-day announced the verdict of the ecclesiastical court which tried Rev. Algernon H. Crapsey, rector of St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, for heresy.

Four members of the court signed the verdict of guilty, and the other member, Dr. Dunham, upholds Dr. Crapsey. The decision in part follows:

"We make and find the following conclusions with respect to the said matters and things written and published by said respondent, and we here set forth for convenient reference that portion of the presentment referred to and herein denominated 'doctrines denied,' being a part of specification 1, charge 1.

Specifications of Finding

"It being intended by said language, words and terms, to express the presbyter's disbelief in and to impugn and to deny the following doctrines, to wit: 1. The doctrine that our Lord Jesus Christ is God, the Saviour of the world. 2. The doctrine that our Lord Jesus Christ was conceived by the Holy Ghost. 3. The doctrine of the virgin birth of our Lord Jesus Christ. 4. The doctrine of the resurrection of our blessed Lord and Saviour. 5. The doctrine of the blessed Trinity. After defining the extent of Dr. Crapsey's guilt on each specification the report concludes as follows:

"In accordance with Section 18 of the ordinances of the ecclesiastical court of this diocese, we state that in our opinion sentence should be pronounced as follows:

"That the respondent be suspended from exercising the functions of a minister of this church until such time as he shall satisfy the ecclesiastical authority of the diocese that his belief and teaching conform to the doctrines of the apostles' creed and the Nicene creed, as this church hath received the same. However, we express the earnest hope and desire that the respondent may see his way clear, during the thirty days which, under the canon of the church, must intervene before sentence can be pronounced fully to satisfy the ecclesiastical authority of such conformity on his part.

(Signed) "W. C. Roberts, President,
"C. S. Boynton, Clerk.
"G. S. Burrows.
"John Mills Gilbert."

Dissenting Report.

The other member of the court, in his separate decision, says:

"I find from his own statements and the evidence submitted for his defence that his error consists rather in presuming to define what God has not been pleased to reveal and to interpret those doctrines in a manner not generally received by the church rather than in a denial and rejection of their truth and authority."

Stay of sentence is certain, as Dr. Crapsey will appeal to the court of review, his appeal preventing the bishop from imposing sentence.

BAR CONSPIRACY IN SWIFT TRIAL

At the continued trial of Timothy J. Swift, former custodian of the Boston post office building, who is charged with graft in the letting of contracts for Government supplies, former Assistant United States District Attorney John H. Casey, counsel for Swift, declared that he would show that Swift was accused as the result of a conspiracy between Postmaster Hibbard, Inspector Lawrence Letherman and Superintendent of Delivery Mark Field.

United States District Attorney objected to this, and he was sustained by Judge Dodge of the United States District Court. This limits the defence to proving an alibi.

FORESTERS OF STATE CONVENE

PITTSFIELD, Mass., May 15.—The eighteenth annual State Convention of Foresters of America opened to-day in the Academy of Music with an address of welcome by Mayor Allen H. Bagg and response by Supreme Deputy A. J. Connelly of Boston. About 325 delegates representing all the Massachusetts courts are in attendance.

Various committees were appointed and this afternoon Grand Secretary J. J. Gallagher of Lowell submitted his report. The total number of Foresters in the State is now 37,537; the number of courts, 236.

Mr. Gallagher's financial report showed total receipts for the year of $20,237; balance on hand from several funds, $803.

The election of officers takes place Wednesday afternoon.

HELD FOR POUNDING WIFE WITH A BAT

MARBLEHEAD, May 15.—Thomas A. Sullivan, a Civil War veteran, was arrested last night for striking his wife with a baseball bat. He is sixty-two years old. His wife was formerly Mrs. Mary Doherty of Boston. Mrs. Sullivan's skull may be fractured. She was taken to the Salem Hospital.

IDENTIFY BODY OF FR. GAPON

ST. PETERSBURG, May 15.—At the inquest on the body of Father Gapon, which was found May 12 in the upper chamber of a lonely inn in the summer suburb of Oerki, Finland, M. Margolin, the former priest's lawyer, positively identified the body.

The autopsy showed that he received a blow on the head, and the theory is that revolutionists were listening in an adjoining room and heard Gapon betray his connection with the government, and that Rutenberg, the terrorist leader, who is said to have lured Gapon to his death, rushed in, felled him to the floor and afterward hanged him.

SHOT HIMSELF TO FRIGHTEN HIS WIFE

PROVIDENCE, May 15.—Joseph Leavens of Millbury, Mass., is at the hospital with a bullet in his head and he will recover, it is said at the institution. Leavens shot himself, he said, to scare his wife into living with him again.

FROM OPIUM LARK TO QUEEN OF CHINATOWN

Thousands Heard Story of "Bella," Now Victim of Great White Plague.

PLAN CHRISTIAN BURIAL

"Bella," Chinatown's dead queen, who succumbed to the great white plague at the city institution on Long Island, is to be given a decent Christian burial.

Mrs. Cora Chinn says so. Twelve years ago Mrs. Chinn left the outer world and took up her abode in the mysterious dark quarters of No. 29 Harrison avenue. She married Charles Chinn and became the friend and confident of Bella Yong Song, the Queen.

Chinatown has contributed liberally to the fund for Bella's burial. Chin Lin Li, who is a Mason, saw that his brethren gave up. Mrs. Chinn cared for the merchants.

This afternoon a delegation of Chinatown's white wives go to Long Island to bring back Bella's remains. At Briggs's chapel on Howard street the services will be held to-morrow. In the Chinese cemetery at Mt. Hope the queen will be laid away, the last chapter of her remarkable life ended.

Becomes Opium Slave.

Who Bella was before she came to Chinatown, why she drifted into the dingy quarters, none knew, save the story she told to every one at twenty-five cents the tell, in a rear room on the third floor at No. 29 Harrison avenue.

It was always the same, running something like this:

"I was induced to smoke opium by a young relative of mine while I was attending a medical school in New York. He took me into a place for a sort of a lark. A little later I thought I would go again. Gradually the habit grew on me until I became a confirmed opium slave.

"My family did everything to have me give it up. They sent me away and tried in every manner possible to make me give up the drug. But I could not.

"Cast off by my own people, at last I was compelled to take refuge in Chinatown, where I could have my longing satisfied. My Chinese husband has always been kind to me. I am as happy here as I can be, for I have my opium, and that satisfies my longing.

Warns Against First Smoke.

"Knowing as I do what it means, I would sooner cut off my right hand than give a young person their first smoke from a pipe. But at the same time I would give my last cent to supply a confirmed opium smoker with the drug, for I know what the craving is and what it means to be without it."

Cora Chinn believes that Bella's people are content to have her buried in the Chinese cemetery without their assistance or presence. The white women of Chinatown and the Masons will be the only mourners with Yong Song, the husband.

NEWS OF LABOR.

That favorable discussion of municipal ownership was stifled by a one-sided committee, was the declaration made by President John Hynes at a meeting of Sheet Metal Workers' Union No. 17 in making his report of the public hearing last Wednesday night at the Common Council chamber. "A hearing started unfairly can only end unfairly," asserted President Hynes.

It was reported that one of the largest firms in the city had agreed to sign the new scale providing for a minimum wage of $3.60 a day. Fifty sheet metal workers will benefit by the increase. The union voted to fine members who are foremen ($15) for hiring men below the minimum wage.

The business agent was instructed to call out the men at a certain shop working on a union contract on Dorchester avenue unless union conditions are adhered to.

CIGARMAKERS CONFIDENT.

Strike benefits to the amount of $7,500 were paid to 1,500 cigarmakers by Treasurer John Lipp of Cigarmakers' Union No. 97 at the end of the first week of the strike. One hundred of this number have returned to work and one hundred more have left town, leaving 1,300 now on the strike payroll. The men expect to return to work to the seven big factories which are holding out inside of two or three weeks at the increased wages demanded.

LYNN MACHINISTS FIRM.

Walter Ames, international vice-president of the International Lodge of Machinists, and Tyson Powers, business agent of Boston Machinists' Lodge No. 264, will address the striking machinists of Lynn to-night at No. 120 Market street. The 250 men who went out are holding firm. It is alleged that professional strike-breakers are being brought to Lynn to fill their places. Three of the nineteen shops struck have signed the agreement.

CHELSEA RETAIL CLERKS.

Chelsea Central Labor Union, at last night's meeting, arranged for a mass meeting to-morrow night at A. O. H. Hall, No. 220 Broadway, Chelsea, to organize the retail clerks. International President Conway of Chicago will be a speaker. The cigarmakers' strike was indorsed, and officers were installed.

LABOR NOTES.

Bricklayers' Union No. 3 indorsed the strike of the bottlers and drivers last night.

Business Agent John J. Gorman of Waiters' Union No. 80 brought in ten new applications at last night's meeting. It was reported that the organization is growing rapidly.

Division No. 80, Order of Railroad Telegraphers, is to send Thomas [illegible] to Europe this Summer to study economic conditions of railroad telegraphers there.

Several new candidates were initiated at the meeting of Boston Division No. 41, Order of Railroad Telegraphers, at Engineers' Hall, No. 164 Canal street. It was reported that the telegraphers of the East are following the example set by the Western operators, who have accomplished much by organizing.

Steamfitters' Helpers' Union No. 79 of Readville closed its charter last night with 600 members on the roll. Nearly every member of the craft in Readville has been obligated and the new organization is already in a prosperous condition.

Steam Shovel and Dredge Men's Union No. 14 will meet on the second Sunday of each month during the Summer. The union indorsed the button of the Newsboys' Protective Union.

The Central Labor Union executive board holds a special meeting to-night to consider several important matters.

Electrical Workers' Union, No. 103 will hold a special meeting to-night at Wells Memorial building.

The Rockland Central Labor Union has indorsed the Cigarmakers' strike.

CHILDREN APPEAR IN FANCY DRESS

Children in all kinds of fancy dances will be seen at Antholne Hall, School street, Somerville, to-night, when the pupils of Mrs. Richard R. Flynn give their recital and competition dances. Medals for the best dancers will be given, and Mrs. Lilla Viles Wyman will act as judge.

MUSICIANS TO HOLD BIG MEET IN BOSTON

The American Federation of Musicians will meet in Faneuil Hall next week in annual convention. There will be nearly 700 delegates present, representing union musicians from all over the United States.

ST. PETER'S REUNION TO BE BIGGEST ON RECORD

FAIR LEADERS IN ST. PETER'S REUNION.

Elaborate Arrangements for Gathering of Parishioners at Mechanics Building.

All arrangements for the reunion and whist party of the parishioners of St. Peter's Church, Meeting House Hill, Dorchester, which is to be held Wednesday evening in Paul Revere and Talbot Halls, Mechanics' Building, have been completed.

The affair is in charge of Rev. Father Ronan, pastor of the church; Fathers Kenney, Blunt, Halloran and Derby, and various committees. It is expected to be the largest reunion the parish has ever held.

Paul Revere Hall will be decorated with palms and ferns, among which an orchestra will be stationed. The whist tables will be in Talbot Hall. Six prizes are offered for the whist players.

On the executive committee are Charles Logue, as chairman, and Edward O'Neil as secretary. Mrs. Mary Watson is chairman of the ladies' executive committee and Miss Adelaide Norton is secretary. Alderman Hennessy leads the souvenir committee, with Mrs. Thomas F. O'Callaghan representing the ladies of the parish.

The proceeds of the entertainment will be added to the building fund.

SHOE MANUFACTURERS INTIMIDATED BY TRUST

Combine Tells Customers They Will Suffer if Machinery Bill Is Not Killed.

Angered by the fear that the "leased machinery" bill will pass the Legislature, the Shoe Machinery Trust is sending letters to its customers which contain the implied threat that, unless the bill is killed, the trust will have to "put on the screws" more severely than ever.

This company virtually controls the shoe machinery trade of New England. Its customers are the boot and shoe manufacturers, big and little, of the East. It is to the big manufacturers that the trust is addressing itself at this time.

For years it has been the rule of the company to prevent their customers from using the machinery of other concerns. Leases were so drawn that no customer could get the trust machines if they used the machines of other companies.

New Inventions Monopolists.

New inventions and improvements have been monopolized by the Machinery Trust with impunity, according to the testimony of witnesses at the hearings before the Committee on Judiciary. To prevent this leasing and to give the small manufacturers a chance to use the cheapest machines they can buy, and inventors a chance to reap the benefits of their brains, the so-called "leased machinery" bill was introduced.

Last year it passed the House and was killed in the Senate. To-day it is in the House Calendar on the question of being engrossed. The fight is again to be made in the Senate if the bill passes the House. In his letter to customers President S. B. Winslow of the trust calls attention specially that the bill will be reached in the Senate by May 15.

Representative Nason of Haverhill has one of the letters sent out by President S. B. Winslow which he will to-day read during the debate in the House. The two striking paragraphs in this letter follow:

"If you think as we do about it (the bill) and desire freedom to deal with the shoe machinery manufacturers, unhampered by restricted legislation, and do not wish to be put to a possible disadvantage in competing with the shoe manufacturers of other States, we suggest that, before the 15th instant, if practicable, you should inform your Senators and Representatives that the legislation proposed by the bill is not in the interest of, and is not wanted by, the shoe trade."

Shoe Manufacturers Afraid.

One of the biggest shoemakers in the State gave Representative Nason the letter and assured him the shoemakers do want the bill, but are afraid to say so publicly.

Here is another quotation from the letter:

"If the above bill, or legislation of like effect, shall be enacted, and shall become operative, we are advised that such a construction will probably be given to it as will require so far as future contracts or dealings with our customers in Massachusetts are concerned, a modification of our methods of doing business which will involve an increase in the selling prices and rentals of machines, an increase in the price for supplies and findings, and a curtailment of the facilities of our branch offices, if not their abandonment, in order that we may not be held to have offered 'unreasonable discounts and other advantages' which may be virtually prohibitive to our competitors."

Louis D. Brandeis and James J. Storrow, directors of the Shoe Machinery Trust, have spoken for it at the State House hearings.

> ### Shoe Trust Threats to Manufacturers
>
> ..."If our contracts with users of our machinery are changed ... we cannot furnish certain machines and facilities at as low prices as we now do.
>
> "If the above bill ... shall be enacted ... we are advised that such a construction will probably be given to it as will require ... a modification of our methods of doing business which will involve an increase in selling prices and the rental for machines.
>
> "If you think as we do about it ... we suggest that ... you inform your Senators and Representatives that the legislation proposed by the foregoing bill is not in the interests of and is not wanted by the shoe trade."

7 NAMED FOR PANEL TO TRY GIRL AVENGER

Work Progresses Slowly in Selecting Jurors in Terranova Case.

NEW YORK, May 15.—With the selection of five more jurors to-day the jury that will try Josephine Terranova, the Italian child wife of seventeen years, who killed her aunt and uncle because they degraded her, will be completed, and the prosecution will outline the State's case. Josephine Terranova has no comprehension of her position, and is happy in the thought that she has avenged her honor and that her husband has forgiven her. She was the same languid, indifferent figure in court to-day.

Play Strongest Card.

Assistant District Attorney Ely, in trying the girl for murder of her aunt, has endeavored to rob the defence of its strongest card. Had Josephine been placed on trial for slaying her uncle, as was expected, the defence would have rested its entire case on the justification of killing a man who had brought shame upon her.

While John Palmieri, counsel for the girl, will try to show that Concetta Riggio, the murdered aunt, aided and abetted her husband, Gaetano Riggio, in every way to debase the young defendant, it is realized that this point will be very hard to present beyond doubt to the jury. An important question will thus be raised in the minds of the jurors: "Could a woman be so debased that she would aid her husband in accomplishing the ruin of her own niece?"

Insanity Is Defence.

The defence has engaged several alienists, who will endeavor to show that the girl, outraged by the realization of her offence and because of debasement her husband of only three days, the only thing she had ever known in her narrow life that had made life happy and worth while, had left her, became temporarily insane and in her frenzied condition slew her seducers.

BANDITS GO TO PRISON FOR TRAIN MURDER

"John Doe" Given Life Sentence, Gouin Not Less Than 20 Years, at Exeter.

Special to the Boston American.

EXETER, N. H., May 15.—After being secretly brought to this city from Portsmouth, guarded by a force of ten deputy sheriffs in command of Sheriff Collis, "John Doe," whose real name has never been learned, and Joseph Gouin, the other men who held up a train at Rockingham Junction and shot and killed Giuseppe Giampa, were taken to court to-day and sentenced.

Both men pleaded guilty to murder in the second degree. John Doe, who, the authorities said, fired the fatal shot, was sentenced to life imprisonment. Gouin was given a sentence of not more than thirty nor less than twenty years.

The two took their sentences without a quiver of an eyelash. In fact they smiled at one another when they looked about the courtroom and saw the preparations that had been made for them. Each was securely manacled to a deputy sheriff. On either side of them were other guards.

At the entrance to the courthouse stood the chief of police, who held up every one who tried to enter and made sure that he was peaceably inclined. Deputy Sheriffs were scattered about the courtroom watching every move on the part of persons not known to them. Each was heavily armed.

It was generally believed that the men would not be taken from the jail at Portsmouth until next Monday. In order to make sure that there would be no plans made for their rescue, the authorities planned the secret coup.

The murder of Giampa came as a result of the attempt made to capture Doe and Gouin for breaking into a shoe shop at Dover and blowing the safe. An officer entered the car in which the two men were riding. They jumped to their feet and ordered everyone to keep his seat. Giampa, frightened, started for the door. One man said to have been Doe, fired, and Giampa fell dead. The men took to the woods, and were captured only when their ammunition gave out.

$30.25 FOR FRISCO FROM HEBREW CLUB

The Hebrew Independent Club of Ward 9 has collected $30.25 for the San Francisco sufferers from among its members and turned it over to the Hearst fund of the BOSTON AMERICAN. Besides this lump contribution its members have made liberal individual subscriptions since the earthquake. The same club raised over $200 for the relief of Jews in Russia.

GETS FOUR MONTHS FOR HORSE THEFT

William A. Reynolds, alias Charles Walters, who says he is a Cambridge barber, was given four months in the House of Correction by Judge Bosson in the Chelsea Police Court to-day for stealing a horse and carriage owned by Dr. Myer of Cambridge.

Reynolds was arrested only a short time ago for stealing the horse and carriage of Lawyer Daniel H. Coakley.

ONE SLAIN, 7 INJURED BY BOMB AT WARSAW

POLICE CHIEF FALLS BY HAND OF ASSASSIN, WHO IS SHOT TO DEATH.

WARSAW, May 15.—Police Captain Constantinoff was torn to pieces in the street and a policeman and six others were injured by a bomb hurled at the police chief last night by a young man.

The assassin in trying to escape wounded a soldier with his revolver. The other soldiers fired a volley, killing the assassin and two other persons.

The soldiers then attacked the people who had gathered, wounding eleven, making a total of four killed and nineteen wounded.

The Terrorists have sought Captain Constantinoff's life since May Day of last year, when he ordered the soldiers to fire on a procession of Socialists, causing the death of thirty.

M. Christenson, an aide to the chief of police of Warsaw, was killed yesterday by an explosion of a bomb thrown at him. Five passers-by were wounded.

CALL 4 MORE WITNESSES IN MUENTER CASE

Special Grand Jury Continues Probing of Alleged Poisoning by Harvard Instructor.

Three additional witnesses were summoned to-day to testify before the special Grand Jury at Lowell, which is hearing the evidence in the case of Erich Muenter, the Harvard instructor who is wanted by the Cambridge police on the charge of poisoning his wife. Muenter has not yet been found. Refused a warrant at Cambridge, the police are now trying to secure an indictment against him.

The witnesses who were served with papers to-day are Professor William E. Castle of Harvard, Mr. and Mrs. Clay of Garfield street, Cambridge, a neighbor of the Muenters, and Gilbert A. A. Pevey, city solicitor of Cambridge, who was retained by Muenter's sister to look after her brother's interests.

GUILD AS THE GUEST.

The Ward 12 Republican Club will entertain Governor Guild at a reception to-night at its new club building at No. 711 Tremont street.

WOMAN 'DEN' SUSPECT PUT UPON TRIAL

Elizabeth Hartford, Accused of Circulating Illegal Printed Matter, in Court.

Elizabeth E. Hartford, arrested yesterday for circulating printed matter giving information as to alleged "murder dens," was brought before Judge Sullivan and her trial begun in the criminal court to-day, and will be continued to-morrow. She is being defended by City Solicitor Harry W. Jones, of Chelsea.

The Hartford woman lives on Winthrop street, Chelsea. She was arrested by Patrolman Mitchell of the Lagrange street police station, who secured information in a visit to the place where she was engaged as a nurse, No. 178A Tremont street. Susan Geary, the Cambridge girl, submitted to an operation which caused her death in this same building. The place was raided on Friday, but nothing of an incriminating nature was found.

The arrest is the first under the new statute enacted by the Legislature which is aimed at the so-called "murder dens" in the city. Conviction means a $1,000 fine or three years in State prison.

RUSH BY LINER TO LEARN FATE OF CHILDREN

Dr. and Mrs. Clark, Arriving on Canopic, Could Get No Word of Family from Frisco.

WERE IN THE HOLY LAND

Frantic with concern as to the fate of their three children in the San Francisco earthquake Dr. and Mrs. Clark of that city rushed from the steamer Canopic at the dock to-day and were hurried to the South station to take a Western express. The Clarks were in the Holy Land when the news of the destruction of San Francisco reached them. Cablegrams to relatives in the stricken city were never answered, but from official sources it was learned that the Clark home had been destroyed, also the home of Dr. Clark's mother. The three children were under her care.

Another passenger on the liner was Professor T. A. Jagger of Harvard, who has been to Naples to study the recent eruptions of Vesuvius. Professor Jagger made many valuable observations of the volcano at close range while it was in action, and gathered valuable data.

Mrs. E. Langlands Fraser, a Scotch woman on her way to Vancouver, B. C., was on board. Mrs. Fraser, who has climbed many mountain peaks, was the first woman to go to the edge of the Vesuvius crater after the big eruption. She went with two guides, and the party was so scared that they came near turning back several times.

Other saloon passengers were D. J. Flanders, general passenger and ticket agent of the Boston & Maine Railroad, who, with his wife and daughter, Miss Ruth Flanders, made a round trip on the Canopic for the benefit of Mr. Flanders's health, and Mr. and Mrs. Alanson Tucker, Boston. Three returning missionaries of the American Board of Foreign Missions arrived on furloughs. They are the Rev. D. A. W. Smith, from Insein, Burmah; Mrs. O. J. Morrow of Newton from Tavoy, Burmah, and Mrs. J. G. Shunn of Lakewood, N. J., from Rangoon, Burmah.

BOY MADE MOTHER HAPPY, WINNING $50 AUTO PRIZE

Young Joseph Collins Stands at Right Spot and Stops the "Green Auto."

Young Joseph Collins, who lives at No. 22 Rogers street, South Boston, an errand boy, asked the "boss" to let him off a couple of hours early yesterday afternoon.

The "boss" granted the lad's request. As a result the boy was made the happy possessor of fifty dollars, more money than he has ever earned in one day before since he went to work, two years ago.

He stopped the green auto of the BOSTON AMERICAN'S story of "The Great Auto Chase" at the corner of East Sixth street and Thomas park, South Boston, at 3:47 yesterday afternoon.

There was an overjoyed family at No. 22 Rogers street when the automobile stopped in front of the house and Joseph Collins rushed in to tell his mother of his good fortune.

"My, but you're a lucky boy, Joe," said his mother, her face radiant at the sight of the bills.

There were probably five hundred people gathered about the corner of Thomas park and East Sixth street when the green White steamer, with Chauffeur Frank Silver driving, swung up G street hill.

The air was filled with waving BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICANS. The crowd shouted itself hoarse.

Efforts were made to board the automobile at the corner of East Fifth street. Several men did cling to the sides. They thought, each and every one of them, that they had won, and demanded to be recognized. That the auto had not reached the designated point where the majority of men and women stood seemed to them to make no difference.

Directly in front of East Sixth street stood young Joseph Collins, shouting "Three cheers for the BOSTON AMERICAN." The moment the big auto came to a stop the boy made a dive and landed squarely in the lap of the BOSTON AMERICAN man on the front seat. His copy of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN, containing "The Great Auto Chase" story, was thrust into the faces of the occupants.

From Thomas Park, the car containing young Collins swung down to No. 22 Rogers street, his home. The BOSTON AMERICAN party, which included Rev. Albert E. George, who was at one time rector of the South Boston Episcopal church, was ushered into the neat little parlor.

"I'm glad the boy won," said Mrs. Collins. "He is always working over problems like that in the BOSTON AMERICAN. He worked over that yesterday with his brother, and said he was going to take the afternoon off and try to win the prize. I didn't think it was much use for him in the crowd, but he was so interested that I didn't try to stop him."

Joseph Collins is sixteen years old, and attended school until two years ago, when he went to work as an errand boy. He is a bright, energetic looking lad, one who appears to be determined to make his way in the world.

Boy Who Did Right Thing at Right Time Won Prize

BY REV. A. E. GEORGE

A BRIGHT-LOOKING boy stood in front of the auto at the corner of Sixth and G streets and yelled "Three cheers for the AMERICAN."

He said this at the right time and at the right place.

He was consequently the victor. Others endeavored to anticipate and were not in order.

They were over-anxious and did not take into consideration the exact place, Sixth street and G, in front of the historical spot where stands the monument which commemorates the victory of George Washington, who drove the British away over a hundred years ago.

All things come to those who wait.

This boy of sixteen has something to remember in this event of his life.

If he continues to do the right things at the right time he is destined to be successful in life.

This boy had no idea of gaining the reward.

But he tried and took his chances.

He received it humbly.

There is an all-time lesson. The boy who is willing to try is bound some time or other to get ahead.

How pleased his mother looked, when she realized that her son had succeeded. Into her humble home this sum of money came as a blessing. It was easily earned, but it also showed that when you set out to do anything you will do it if you are careful in making your opportunity.

There is no home happier than this one on Rogers street, and the mother and father may expect greater things of this boy in the near future.

$100 in Prizes Every Week in 'Auto Chase'

Each week the BOSTON AMERICAN gives away $100 in prizes to those who correctly guess the cipher in "The Great Auto Chase" story.

The cipher is in the instalment published in the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN.

To the person who first stops the green auto at the proper time and place $50 is given. To the others who send in the first correct solutions to the Prize Story Editor $50 is given.

Read "The Great Auto Chase" and try to win one of the weekly prizes.

RHODE ISLAND AND MASSACHUSETTS TEACHERS CAPTURE THE CASH.

Here are the winners of the European Tour Election "Progress Prizes."

Miss Agnes K. Crofwell of Providence, R. I., leads them all.

This popular teacher of the America School was the only candidate to pass the 300,000 mark in the six-day voting contest. She scored 338,273 votes between Sunday and Friday last.

Miss Grace J. Allan of Bristol, R. I., was second, with 260,702. Miss Ellen de S. Barrett of Newburyport, Mass., was third with 210,992 votes.

Each of these teachers receives $100 in cash.

The three $50 prizes for the next highest gains during the six days go to Miss Elizabeth Sharry of Worcester, Miss Mabelle McKeon of Bristol and Miss Annie V. McGourty of Worcester.

The three $25 prizes for next high gains are taken by Miss Mary W. Bonython of Boston, Miss Katherine L. Moynihan of Berlin, N. H., and Mrs. Nellie B. Bidleman of Worcester.

Little Rhode Island Beats All.

Thus Rhode Island—and particularly Providence and Bristol—take first honors and most of the money for their loyal support of their favorite women school teachers for the prize European tours offered by the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN.

Massachusetts Division, with Worcester as its centre of activity, is a close second, capturing four prizes, one first award of $100, two second prizes of $50 each, and one third prize of $25, making a total of $225 for the State outside of Boston.

Greater Boston Division gets but one cash prize of $25, secured by the splendid campaign of Miss Mary Bonython of old Eliot School, who was 27,227 votes ahead of Miss Idella E. Seldis of the same school, her nearest competitor in the city.

The Maine, New Hampshire and Connecticut Division also secures only one of the $25 prizes, won by its leader, Miss Katherine Moynihan of Berlin, N. H., though Miss Beatrice May of St. Johnsbury, Vt., and Miss Isabel Kateon of Bath, Me., were strong contenders.

The finish of the "Progress Contest" is full of interest. The standing of the candidates for the forty tours is all upset. New teachers have bounded forward as formidable contenders for the foreign trips and $1,000 cash to be awarded on the final count of the European Election, after June 24.

The heavy voting for "Progress" completely upset the Greater Boston list.

Miss Rachel Rosnosky of Roxbury is retired from the leadership she has held so many weeks to fourth place, having gained only 62,199 votes during the six days.

Miss Ella M. Brotchie of Waltham sprang from twenty-eighth place to seventh in the winning list, and Miss Mary B. Tenney of Boston advanced from fourteenth to eighth.

Twenty Next-Best Gains.

The twenty best gains next in size to the nine winning the prizes were the following:

"Consolation Prizes" Are Almost Ready

The "Concolation Prizes" to be awarded to non-winners of Summer trips abroad in the European Tour Election will be announced in the BOSTON AMERICAN during the next few days.

These prizes for the popular women school teachers who fail to capture one of the forty European tours will be worthy of every candidate's effort.

HEARST NEXT GOVERNOR, SAYS REPUBLICAN

Special to the Boston American.

BUFFALO, N. Y., May 15.—Rowland B. Mahany, former Republican representative in Congress and former minister to Ecuador, yesterday predicted the nomination and election of William Randolph Hearst for Governor of New York.

While declaring his belief in Republicanism as exemplified by Lincoln, Mr. Mahany said:

"If the Republican party intends or hopes to defeat this formidable opponent, it will have to put forth a man as unequivocally sincere as Mr. Hearst, and, what is more, as thoroughly believed by the people to be so.

"The wiser the Republican leaders are the more cautiously they will proceed in the selection of their State ticket this Fall to meet what now seems Mr. Hearst's inevitable nomination and his impending election as Governor of New York.

"The reason, however, for Mr. Hearst's commanding position in the eyes of the American people to-day is due to the fact that they believe he will, if elected Governor or President, carry out absolutely in letter and in spirit every pledge he has made or will make.

"Moreover, district attorneys like that of the fakir of the universe, William Travers Jerome of New York, would be given short shift if they were discovered carrying out pre-election bargains to let giant thieves escape under cover of crucifying small offenders."

"THE GREAT AUTO CHASE."

By Thompson Peel.

CHAPTER XXXI.

In the Toils.

THE back entrance to The Barns was through a narrow and poorly lighted passage. In the next street, which was of a respectable appearance, this passage widened and ended in rather a pretentious opening. The pavement was of cement, and a huge gate, a wrought iron affair, swung from a little brick house, a queer looking structure, the windows of which were always closed.

Late that night, long after the people of The Barns were asleep, three men alighted from a carriage at the iron gateway and made their way along the passage connecting with The Barns, bearing the inanimate figure of a man.

The back door of No. 14 was opened by Mrs. Hooker herself. She had evidently been waiting for the others. Hammond took the insensible man in his arms and carried him up to the room prepared for him, a proceeding which filled his aunt with alarm.

"This looks like the police to me," she exclaimed.

She followed Hammond and questioned him in an undertone.

"It ain't murder, Pug, is it?" she asked.

"Not on your sweet," he replied. "Don't you know the difference between murder and being knocked out by a little accident. Now vamoose, beat it. We want to talk business."

She went away reluctantly, muttering and shaking her head. She was afraid of consequences.

Hammond went into the front room, where Culberson and Davis had already put out a bottle of whiskey and a box of cigars. Hammond reached for the bottle.

"I've made the Willie boy comfortable," he explained, "and he'll snooze for a few hours. After that—well, here goes!"

"What are we going to do with him?" asked Davis.

"We must keep him here," replied Culberson, "until we find ourselves another place. How he got on our track I don't know, but he and Joe Morgan and some kid they had picked up have been dogging us for the last two days. It has taken some clever manoeuvering to keep them from pouncing on us. I have met this man in Cambridge, and if he sees me now the game is up."

"He's safe enough here," remarked Hammond.

"How did you get him by himself?" asked Davis.

"I had a man on watch," Culberson answered. "Joe Morgan and the kid got out of the auto and this man started home. When he reached there he got a telephone message telling him to go to Miss Pierce's school in Cambridge. When he stepped out of the auto it didn't take long for Hammond and myself to come from the shadows and put a handkerchief, well soaked in chloroform over his nose. We dragged him to our auto, which was just out of sight, around a dark corner, and presto!—he is here."

Culberson and Hammond laughed cheerfully over the recollection.

"Well," put in Davis, when their laughter subsided, "I can tell you something not so amusing. South Boston is not safe for us."

"How is that?" asked the others, simultaneously, rather alarmed.

"Joe Morgan is in this part of the city for one thing right now. I have seen him nosing around nearly everywhere I go. Another reason is that a man has been dogging my footsteps for days. I did not realize it at first, but now I know."

"Do you think you were watched coming here?" asked Culberson, thoroughly alarmed.

"No, I shook him off to-day. I went into a saloon, gave the bartender a $10 bill and was allowed to go out through a back alley opening into another street."

"What about Margaret Taylor?" asked Culberson.

"Oh, she's in Boston, all right, all right," Davis replied. Then, turning to Hammond, he indicated the bottle. "Go get some more whiskey, Hammond," he directed.

When Hammond had disappeared Davis leaned forward and touched Culberson significantly on the arm.

"Now that Hammond is gone," he said, "I have something important to tell you."

To Be Continued To-morrow

DOG SHARES HIS MASTER'S CELL

Sharing in the Somerville jail the cell of Frank Repezo, who was arrested to-day on the charge of receiving stolen goods, is an affectionate little fox terrier. When its master was taken into custody the dog followed the patrol wagon to the station, crouching at Repezo's feet during his examination. When his hearing was continued and he was sent to jail in default of $600 bail, the dog slipped into the cell before him, snarling so savagely that it was decided to allow the animal to remain.

Repezo had 500 boxes of cigars in his possession when arrested, which he had been trying to sell at prices so low that the police became suspicious. Repezo declines to tell where he obtained the stock.

NEW YORK, May 15.—The total of the Hearst San Francisco relief fund to-day is $241,028.38.

JILTED GIRL IN FATAL PLUNGE

CHICAGO, May 15.—Worry, caused by an estrangement with her sweetheart, is believed to have led Miss Lily Operman, twenty-seven years old, to leap from the third story window of her home early to-day. She is suffering from several broken ribs, a fractured skull and internal injuries. Physicians say she will die. The police said the young woman had been jilted recently.

ARSON CHARGE, HELD IN $5,000

Peter H. Moore, of No. 137 Essex street, Chelsea, was brought before the Police Court of that city to-day to answer to a charge of setting fire to the house where he had previously lived, at No. 75 Maverick street. Moore pleaded not guilty, and Judge Bosson ordered him to furnish a $5,000 bond for appearance in court next Saturday.

James T. Parsons, who lives on the lower floor of the Maverick street house, told the court of having found on the night of Monday, May 7, two fires in the apartments of Moore. One was in a bed and the other was where a lighted lamp had been tipped over. He called the police, and Moore's arrest followed.

Moore said that neither he nor his family was at home that night, and that he knew nothing about there being a fire until he came home.

TEARS OVERWHELM THE SMILES IN THIS WEEK'S PLAYS

MISS ANGLIN IS SUPERB IN A GREAT PLAY

When Sarah Bernhardt saw Margaret Anglin play "Zira" in New York she said: "There is the greatest emotional actress in America." And at the Majestic Theatre last night Miss Anglin justified the praise of the great French actress.

As Hester Trent in "Zira" her work is superb. Few women on the stage have her power of portraying human emotion. It was all acting, of course, but it was only the more marvellous because of that. In the brief space of one act she sweeps through grief, dejection, utter hopelessness, abject humiliation, passionate resentment, brazen defiance and pitiful pleading, and she carries her audience with her. They feel as she does, and scores of wet eyes in the house last night attested this fact.

It is in the third act, when, abjectly abasing herself, she confesses to Lady Clavering, that she strikes her truest note. In the early scenes of the play she is repressed, although none the less convincing, but in this act she rises to the full height of her power. She shows why Bernhardt made her comment. Not once did she sound a false note, and in the scene of mingled rage and grief, in which she pleads for some show of mercy, and then, in a final burst of passion, defies her prosecutor and fate, she fairly electrified her audience.

Her eyes, the expression of her face, her whole body vibrating with emotion, her gestures, her voice changing from its natural tone to the guttural rasping of despair, all marked the real artist. She almost took her audience out of their seats, and the burst of applause that followed was a sincere and heartfelt tribute to her genius. Truly, Margaret Anglin has "arrived" and has taken her well-earned place in the front rank of actresses.

Not all the praise should be given to Miss Anglin, however; a goodly share is due her support. Lucille Watson makes of Ruth Wilding a cold-hearted, vindictive woman, a character repellant, but forceful. It is a thankless part, but Miss Watson played it masterfully. Mrs. Thomas Whiffen, as the lovely, obstinate old Lady Clavering, was delightful.

KEITH'S BILL IS UNUSUALLY GOOD

There are two headliners at Keith's this week and several other acts worthy of more than passing notice. Salerno is a juggler who is really a novelty. His business, while somewhat along the same lines as other first-class jugglers, is yet sufficiently different to make it worth one's while to see him.

Then there was Johnny Hyams and Leila McIntyre in a really funny sketch. "Two Hundred Wives" was the name of it, but that really cut no figure. They would have been amusing, they would have given people a genuine laugh no matter what they had called the sketch.

The real surprise of the program was in the person of Willa Holt Wakefield. Her act is quiet, pretty, attractive, satisfying and every other adjective you can think of except strenuous. She talks songs, and you will take off your hat to her when you see her. She is pretty, she has a charming voice, and she is—but what's the use?—she is clever. So are the Camille trio, acrobats. They do good work on triple bars, and are comedians. The Quartet Basque, three men and a woman, sang several selections from "Carmen" particularly well.

POWERFUL PLAY SKILFULLY PLAYED

No matter how old a play is, if it is powerful and thrilling it always draws huge audiences whenever it is revived. "Jim The Penman" is one of this class—it is powerful and thrilling. Its plot is dramatic, it is skilfully written and it was played last night by the Castle Square company in an equally skilful manner. Howell Hansel played the title role and played it well. It is not often that Mr. Hansel has a role which brings vice into it in addition to the "hero" part, and he thus had an opportunity to display another bit of his versatility. Equal honors in this play are given to the wife of Ralston, played last night by Miss Kemble, and she equally deserved them. Mr. McVay's sincerity, his perfect regard for the lights and the shades of the character and the perfect finish of his work in all its phases, makes him one of the most satisfactory actors to watch that the Castle Square company possesses.

FRISCO HORROR IN PICTURES AT THEATRE

Boston and San Francisco will be brought very close together to-morrow evening at the reopening of the Park Theatre with the moving pictures taken on the spot the day of the earthquake by the Miles Brothers, the California photographers. These pictures form the most vivid exhibition of the year. It is a complete reproduction of the great disaster. The camera will show San Francisco as it was a month ago, the damage of the earthquake, the progress of the flames, the blowing down of great buildings, the scenes of desolation and the progress of relief.

'A MERRY WHIRL' AND 'GROGAN'S ALLEY'

French Folly Burlesquers present a varied and entertaining bill at the Palace Theatre this week. The big company is presented in two burlesques, "A Merry Whirl" and "Grogan's Alley," designed for laughing purposes only. Among those who have good musical numbers are the Esher sisters, Hattie Mills, Mae Bryant, Lillian Keeley and Cora Evelyn, while the fun is in the hands of Messrs. Patterson, Dixon, Stevens, Schuster and Phillips.

"SLAVE GIRL" TELLS DRAMATIC STORY

"The Slave Girl," a melodramatic Southern story, won great favor at the Bowdoin Square Theatre yesterday. The players, the play and the mountings are of the highest order of merit, and all combine to make the drama one of the hits of the season. The scenic dress of the play, particularly that which shows the cotton field and an old Southern home, are particularly brilliant. The leading role of Robert Perrin is finely acted by Wilmer Walter, whose peculiar Southern intonations of voice are strikingly natural.

Lyceum Theatre

Clark's Runaway Girls present a creditable entertainment at the Lyceum Theatre this week, comprising two acts of a musical comedy entitled "The Sultan's Dilemma," with an olio sandwiched in. The leading parts are taken by Bert Wiggins and Abe Reynolds, Tillie Stork and Susie Goodwin. Among the hits are "The Bowery Girls," "Big Indian Chieftain" and a new song, "Won't You Be My Girl?" sung by Frank Fox, one of the Bowery Boys' Quartet.

THREE STARS WHO ILLUMINE THE LOCAL STAGE THIS WEEK.

MARGARET ANGLIN AT THE MAJESTIC

GRACE GEORGE AT THE COLONIAL

NANCE O'NEIL AT THE HOLLIS.

NANCE O'NEIL IN AN OLD PLAY

Nance O'Neil opened her farewell week at the Hollis Street with a presentation of "Magda," perhaps the most finely adjusted vehicle for the display of her superb emotional ability in her remarkable repertoire.

This is the play with which Nance O'Neil won her way into the hearts of Boston theatregoers three years ago, on her initial appearance as a star.

Nance O'Neil's presentation of "Magda" last night was distinctly superior to the "Magda" of the days when she was last seen in Boston. Her "Magda" of last night was more mature, more finished and withal just as forceful. Her support, too, is much better. Her company is far stronger than any which has surrounded her in any previous Boston engagement.

For the balance of the week Miss O'Neil offers an attractive bill. To-night and to-morrow night she will give "The Jewess." Her presentation of "Leah," the central figure in a powerful play, is not unknown in Boston, and her revival of one of her favorite plays will be appreciated.

At the Wednesday matinee "Camille" will be given, and fittingly, too, for "Camille" has always been Miss O'Neil's most popular role with matinee audiences.

For the balance of the week, including Saturday matinee, the play will be "Oliver Twist."

ACTRESS REPEATS SUCCESS IN ROLE

When an actress of prominence goes into stock work and has the opportunity to play there a role in which she won great favor when she was with the regular company which played the piece, it is a pretty sure guess that the play will be well produced. Katherine Grey was the original Mellita in "The Last Appeal," written by Leo Ditrichstein five years ago. She made an instantaneous hit in it. "The Last Appeal" was put on at the Empire Theatre yesterday, and Miss Grey repeated her success in the role of Mellita.

William Lamp outdid himself in the role of crown prince, showing a deep study into the characteristics of the Austrian race, both in make-up and mannerisms. William Humphrey got a little out of his usual stereotyped way of acting, and made a very satisfactory king. Lillian Bayer as the Kathrin again showed that she is one of the best all-round actresses seen here for a long time. In fact, the entire cast acts with sincerity and conviction.

IN SHAKESPEARIAN PLAYS OUT OF DOORS

Rain will make no difference with the coming exhibition of Shakespearian comedies out-of-doors by Ben Greet and his Woodland players on the lawn of Mrs. John Lowell at Chestnut Hill, May 28 and 29. In case of a stormy day the performances will be tranferred to Jordan Hall or Chickering Hall. Mr. Greet has chosen these plays for his appearances here: "As You Like It," Monday afternoon; "The Tempest," Monday evening and Tuesday afternoon; "Midsummer Night's Dream" Tuesday evening. The performances will be for the benefit of St. Monica's Home for Colored Women and Children and the Massachusetts Infant Asylum.

Austin & Stone's Museum

This is novelty week at Austin & Stone's Museum. Aga, the famous $50,000 mystery, presented by the Matzonis, is the most remarkable act of levitation seen in Boston for many a year. An act showing animal intelligence of a high order is that by Roscoe, "The Mind Reading Horse," the giant bull Banjo, Lieutenant Walter Sands, the gun and sword marvel; Oklahoma Bill, the "pride of the plains"; Punch and Judy and Ben Hur, the largest snake in the world, are other features in the curio hall. "The Minstrel Maids" have some new songs, costumes and dances, and the olio presents George F. Havard, Ruby Hart, Charles Dolan, Harbeck and Harris, Mignon Sisters and Dole and Dolby.

FAYS MYSTIFY AND FASCINATE

Mrs. Eva Fay again mystified an enormous audience by her remarkable feats in thaumaturgy last night at the Globe Theatre, and those who went out of curiosity came away determined to go again because of the fascination which her performance held for them. When the curtain arose upon Mrs. Fay's part, during which she answers the questions, there was an almost breathless silence while Mr. Fay made his introductory remarks regarding the experiments which were to come.

Last night Mr. Fay presented an experiment in mid-air levitation that caused amazement and astonishment to be written on everyone's face. Working as he did in full view of the audience, without any dimming or flashing of the lights, but with the steady, full glare of every light upon him, it was indeed mystifying to witness the girl arising from the couch into the air and then see the couch withdrawn and replaced and she lowered again on to it.

GREAT VAUDEVILLE AT THE OLD HOWARD

One of the best balanced bills the Old Howard has had in several weeks is offered at that famous theatre this week. The great olio hit is contributed by Byers and Herman, in a sensational spectacular pantomime. Byron and Langdon in "The Dude Detective," are also head-liners. Irving Jones, the coon-town comedian; Irene and her acting dog, Zaza; Ed B. and Rolla White, in a comedy skit; Laura Ordway, the English comedienne; Dan Malumby, singer of comic songs; LeClair and West, Barlow and Nicholson, Frederick the illusionist and the Howardscope complete the excellent olio. The burlesque called "A Clear Course" is of the usual brilliancy, with George B. Alexander in a special number with a big ensemble.

"LES MISERABLES" IS NOW DRAMATIZED

Special to the Boston American.

WATERBURY, Ct., May 14.—Wilton Lackaye appeared for the first time on any stage at the Opera House here to-night in the character of Jean Valjean in "The Law and the Man," his own dramatization of Victor Hugo's "Les Miserables." The play marks the first effort to condense this great poem of civilization into one drama. It affords Mr. Lackaye a magnificent opportunity for the display of his genius as a character actor.

GRACE GEORGE WINS BY HER PERSONALITY

Personality won a great victory last evening at the Colonial Theatre. Only personality—strong, pleasant, attractive, magnetic personality—could have won such a victory against such odds. The personality won because it was the thing that most appealed to the audience. The play would have been a complete failure without Miss George—not that all the other actors were not good, for they were excellent, but simply because the character of the heroine did not appeal to the audience. They could not applaud HER—they could applaud Miss George. Kitty Ashe got no sympathy from the audience. The people did not, they could not, like her—therefore they did not care for the play, for when an audience cannot give out its heart to the heroine, when it feels that she got all that she deserved and that she was an exasperating little fool, it has a sort of revulsion of feeling. Kitty's is not a character that people can sympathize with, therefore they leave the theatre with a dissatisfied feeling, as if they hadn't been given all that they expected.

In many ways the character of Kitty Ashe is insipid, but it is saved by Miss George's very magnetic and pleasing personality. In all the roles she has created she has done none better. She realizes perfectly the peculiar complexities, the loyalty and irresponsibility of the girlish Kitty. Her fragile appearance and semi-childish look are quite in line with the character as depicted by Mrs. Ward. She is particularly winsome in the scene where she appears in a misfit gown, a cross between a bathing suit and a ball dress, and her mimicry is delightful. It is a great pleasure to watch her work. She puts her whole soul into it. It is a pity that she has a role that so impresses her auditors with its repugnance that they cannot overcome their dislike for it quickly enough to give her the applause she deserves at the fall of the curtain.

Mr. Brady has given her an excellent supporting company. H. Reeves-Smith always is strong, able and finished. He is particularly so as William Ashe, and he makes of him a manly, lovable, loyal and true man. To Ben Webster is given the role of Geoffrey Cliffe, the hero-poet. Mr. Webster looks like Byron and Virgil shaken up together—very poetic, but for the hero side he seems to be chosen for his heroism at the bridge whist table rather than the battlefield. There are a number of other characters, all of whom have a little to do and do it well. Mortimer Weldon has perhaps a little more to do than the rest. He has greatly improved since his recent stock experience here.

PARISIAN BELLES AND FRISCO VIEWS

San Francisco's earthquake and fire horror was the subject of the elegant series of motion pictures shown at the Columbia yesterday. The city was first shown in all its beauty before the disaster, at the time when President Roosevelt was a guest of the city. Then the terrible contrast when fire and ruin devastated the business section and the greater part of the dwellings was next thrown upon the screen. It was interesting to watch the dynamiting crew at work blowing up the dangerous walls of the skyscrapers, to see the homeless men, women and children wandering aimlessly about in Golden Gate Park and the Presidio, to see the long bread line. All these scenes and many more held the audience with an indescribable fascination. The Parisian Belles gave a splendid burlesque entertainment in addition.

'THE STOLEN STORY' IN GREAT DEMAND

"The Stolen Story," thanks to a fine opening, has made a name for itself in one week at the Tremont, and the second week finds it in great demand. It is something of a feat to discover a new topic for stage treatment that lends itself for the purpose so readily as does the life of American newspaper men. With this definite advantage, the author has also a lively narrative to tell and successfully weaves in the romance that is necessary to make his play appealing.

"A YANKEE CIRCUS" ON FINAL WEEK

This is the last week of "A Yankee Circus on Mars," the big hippodrome show which is crowding the Boston Theatre every afternoon and evening. The show is better now than it was at the initiative, for not only is the performance smoother, but novelties have been introduced, one of which—Wulff's leaping boarhounds—is a highly delightful feature of the entertainment.

While the musical comedy and extravaganza features retain as strong a hold as ever upon the public and are still generously applauded, it is the circus acts which are received with the loudest acclaim.

Time saved in the fermentation process allows a larger percentage of the gluten and the nourishing properties to remain undestroyed by the yeast germ. Through thorough hydration and aeration, fermenting the entire mass of dough with tiny air cells, allowing easy distribution of the gas, the work of fermentation is achieved in one-half the time usually required.

Umpire—Connolly.

BY A. H. C. MITCHELL.

HUNTINGTON AVENUE GROUNDS, Boston, May 15.—The wretched Pilgrims came up for another walloping this afternoon, it being the last game of the series with the St. Louis Browns. The weather remained chilly and the fans were likewise. They were willing to warm up, but there has been nothing in the playing of the former champions to arouse enthusiasm, so the faithful brought along their heaviest ulsters and sought the sunny spots in grand stand and bleachers.

The baseball situation in this city has passed beyond the funny stage. The patrons of the game now take the thing seriously and they are demanding that Collins do something. They are pointing out to him his mistakes and calling attention to the fact that he is apparently doing nothing to brace up his men. He has been given a free rein this season, and the whole proposition is entirely up to him.

The crowd on hand to-day was not a fraction of what it would be if the team was playing championship ball, and the weather was warmer. As a last resort Collins put Tannehill in the box in a last grand effort to change the luck. The Southpaw got his bumps the last time out, but those sort of things do not happen twice in succession with him very often. There was a rush among the betting men to plunge on Boston in order to recoup.

As Ban Johnson has received Tannehill's and Selbach's contracts these men were in the ranks again, much to the satisfaction of the loyal.

NEW YORK, May 15.—Terry McGovern, the feather weight champion of the world, and Jimmy Britt, the greatest fighter ever turned out of California, will probably be matched this afternoon. The managers of the two men, Joe Humphreys, representing McGovern and Willie Britt, acting for his brother, are to meet in the office of the Evening Journal at Jersey City this afternoon. McGovern and Britt are at loggerheads over several conditions covering the match, the principal one being the question of weight.

ST. LOUIS, May 15.—It was get away day for the Hub Nationals, and they wanted the final game with the Cardinals the worst way.

Captain Tenney saw visions of breaking even in the series by taking to-day's contest and urged his men to let out a few more links in the scramble to pick off a win.

Tenney held his trump card in the boxing line up his sleeve for this final occasion, and he had little "Cy" Young, the farmer boy, well primed to do some wonderful slinging.

The locals knew that they would have to stretch themselves the limit to be in the running against the sturdy southpaw and hit the pike with lots of early speed.

McFarland, with his seasoned arm, was selected to save the day for McCloskey's bunch, and the maker of benders was primed for the struggle.

TIM HURST GETS HIS FOR PUNCHING

NEW YORK, May 15.—An outcome of the scrap on the field at American League Park last week between Manager Griffith and Umpire Tim Hurst is the suspension of those two men by President Johnson of the American League. Each has been set down for five days. Word to that effect was received here yesterday.

This is not all. Elberfeld, the shortstop of the local team, has been suspended for three days. The Kid was put out of a game last week by Umpire Evans, and for this, presumably, he has been disciplined. Elberfeld has been Griffith's first assistant in directing the team on the field, and now a temporary leader will have to be dug up. With Williams out of the game and Laporte at second and Moriarity at third, it is likely that Conroy will be brought in to play short, provided Hoffman is in shape to go to centrefield. If not, Yeager will understudy Elberfeld at short.

BRAKE IMPORTANT AUTO MAKERS SAY

BY J. C. KERRISON.

Few except the most experienced motorists realize the absolute necessity of good brakes on an automobile. Riding along city streets where there are few abrupt down grades, and where there is little use for brakes that will stop a car almost on the instant, the ordinary automobile user seldom feels the necessity of the kind that are equal to every call. For that reason the brake question is one of the things about a car that they are very likely to overlook when making their pre-purchase investigations.

Some of the manufacturers, however, have taken care of this question for them, and have equipped their cars with brakes that are warranted to hold the car anywhere, unless, possibly, the driver wishes to go down the side of a house. With the coming of the big car, with its increased length and greater seating capacity, the American makers of cars of this kind have gone to the extreme in their efforts to give their customers every possible degree of safety.

To achieve this result both foreign and American makers of the larger high-grade cars are now concentrating their brakes on the rear hubs, one set being internal and the other expanding against the hub, and the other set external and operating on the outside. In this way the rim of the hub, when both brakes are applied, is practically held in a vise, and the car may be stopped in short order.

At least one manufacturer has gone farther than this in order to be on the safe side. He has coupled to both the foot and emergency brakes an attachment that, when either is applied, not only disconnects the clutch, but throttles the motor. This latter device does away with a complicated governor.

Edward P. Bliss of Boston, who, together with his family, is touring through Italy on a White steamer, writes most interestingly of his experience to Mr. J. S. Hathaway of this city. In his last letter Mr. Bliss says:

"From Naples we rode to Pompeii, thence in a three-day run to Cava Anali, Sorrento, and back to Naples. We had to make some long climbs on this magnificent road.

"We left Naples when the ashes were falling and came to Rome in one day, 160 miles, over bad roads and during most of the day in a pouring rain. We made the run within a half-hour of the regulation time for the big French cars. We made several tours into the country about Rome, the car always winning praise.

"About all the foreign cars have limousine tops and ours looks so light and airy it attracts attention. Many Americans were glad to see the car, and we are running with our Massachusetts number, 7,640. From Rome we took the chances of long climbing over the Apennines, instead of choosing the more level way, and Oscar was proud to give our dust to a big Panhard that could not catch us in uphill work. We stayed two days in Perugia, and then came to Florence. The roads from Rome up are excellent, the mountain country beautiful, and this last little journey will be a star remembrance. Oscar is now giving the car a good grooming after 700 miles run. We have not had a mishap, and our only trouble has been with tires.

From here we shall run through Northern Italy. I hope to send you a later report, fully as favorable. We expect to run up into Scotland in June."

E. A. Gilmore, of the local Rambler branch, who spent the whole of last week in touring through Rhode Island and Connecticut, started off on another trip yesterday. He made the run from Boston to Portland in the afternoon, and before he returns will probably push his way to Montreal.

* * *

A new Buffum runabout reached Boston yesterday morning and attracted considerable attention at the salesroom of S. N. Breed in Park square. This is one of the latest of the year's models and is an attractive car, to say the least.

* * *

The new four cylinder two-cycle Elmore and the Model S Oldsmobile runabout were placed on the floor of Adams-Sutton Co. in the motor mart yesterday and immediately became the centre of attraction.

COLLINS WON'T PLAY TENNIS ABROAD

NEW YORK, May 15.—Kreigh Collins, the Chicago tennis expert, announced that he had decided not to accompany the American International Lawn Tennis team to Europe to compete for the Davis challenge cup. Collins was taken ill while the Americans were practicing in Philadelphia, and although he came out for practice regularly he is still in pretty bad shape.

The first intimation of his determination not to play on the team came yesterday, when he announced that he would not sail with the other players. In the recent practice at the Knollwood Country Club, White Plains, it was noticed that Collins was playing poorly. He was easily beaten in all the single matches, and did not put up a good game in the doubles. This was generally attributed to his illness and it was freely predicted that he would soon round into shape again.

Collins, however, has despaired of catching up the time he has lost, and thought it better not to go to Europe at all than to act as a handicap to his fellow players. His place on the team will not be filled, and the bulk of the European games will fall upon Raymond D. Little, Beals Wright and Holcombe Ward, the other team members.

DAN M'GANN SUSPENDED BY PULLIAM

CINCINNATI, May 15.—"Johnstone threatened to get even with the New Yorks. His report to President Pulliam on the occurrence of Saturday evidently was in line with that threat and makes it good."

Thus spoke Manager McGraw of the New York Giants, when the information was given him that McGann, his big captain and first baseman, had been indefinitely suspended by President Pulliam, presumably for his kick on Johnstone's decision in the eleventh inning of Saturday's game, when Bresnahan was called out at second on an attempted steal.

"This man Johnstone is going around looking for trouble all the time," continued McGraw. "The present affair dates back to last season, when, after a game at the Polo Grounds, some irresponsible fan encountered Johnstone at the foot of the steps leading to the elevated road, and proceeded to mutilate his face.

"Johnstone insisted that the New York players were at the bottom of the assault, and that he would be even with them for it. He seems to have nursed that belief and threat ever since, and now is trying to make good on it. There seems to be a conspiracy against the Giants."

Bradley Liked in Bout With Market Champion

Judging by the arguments advanced by the adherents of Fred Bradley and Jerry Gaines, this match will create more interest than any card that could have been secured. There has been talk in the past that Gaines has been handed some "lemons," but anyone that has seen Bradley perform is morally certain that the Market Teamster is against the real thing.

There will be nothing to it but a fast whirlwind contest. Bradley never let's his opponent keep away from him, but follows him closely around the ring. Gaines cannot whip a defensive fighter, but with an aggressive fellow like Bradley in front of him Jerry will have a chance to send over his "haymaker." It is an open hitting affair, but good judges like Captain Bill Daly are pronounced in opinion that Bradley will win.

The eight-round semi-final between Young Freeman of South Boston and Billy Connarty of Cambridge looks like the candy. Their last bout of six rounds ended in a draw after a fast fight.

Al Bates meets Frank Adams. Both of these boys have made good in Chelsea, and as an opener it ought to be the real goods.

The other bout, between Dutch Carr and Connie Mack, is for the middleweight championship of Charlestown.

In the opener, Freddie O'Brien and Mike Grady will box six rounds.

Without doubt there will be more sport seen at Chelsea Wednesday night than has been crowded into an evening's entertainment for a long time. It is a show that everyone who loves boxing should witness.

HARVARD TENNIS TEAM.

The Harvard 'varsity tennis team, which meets Yale May 26 at New Haven, was finally decided upon yesterday. Four players as a result of the last week's trials were chosen, but yesterday the last two men, S. A. Eiseman, '07, and S. L. Howland, '2L., were added to the team after winning their matches. The team is now composed of the following men: R. N. Smithers, '06 (captain); F. J. Sulloway, 2L.; S. L. Howland, 2L.; N. W. Niles, '09; F. F. de Rham, 2L.; S. A. Eiseman, '07.

YACHTS GATHERING AT MARBLEHEAD

MARBLEHEAD, May 14.—The harbor is beginning to assume its Summer appearance. Already many of the racing crafts have had their first spins under canvas and in a few cases the new boats have been given a preliminary stretching.

To-morrow it is probable that the Marie L., a new 22-footer built for George Lee of Medric fame, will arrive here to be dressed for a strenuous season. She was built by Fenton at Manchester and looks fit to give the Tyro and others a tussle.

The arrival of the boats of the sonderklasse are being watched with great interest. Before May 30 it is expected that at least six will be harbored here. The Sumtra, first boat to be tried out, built for Francis Skinner of the Eastern Yacht Club and designed by B. B. Crowninshield, was reefed down and again sent out to-day. Her work was entirely satisfactory though not startling, as it could not be under these conditions. Dr. Morton Prince will give his sonder boat a tryout some time this week. This craft, resembling the scow-canoe shape, looks about as formidable as is possible under the conditions. C. H. W. Foster, whose boat is building at Manchester, expects to have his craft here for a tryout before the holiday. F. Lewis Clark will call his sonder boat the Spokane. H. L. Bowden hopes to have Graves at work upon the designs of his boat, now in the hands of Crowninshield, at the end of the week. There will be sixteen or seventeen boats in this class.

Now that the yachts are dropping overboard rapidly and the talk at the yacht clubs consists principally of discussing plans for the year, it can be readily seen that the season of 1906 will be a busy one.

More so than usual, Marblehead will be the headquarters of the fleets on the New England coast. Until June 30 there will be harbor races under the auspices of the different yacht clubs. Then the fleet consisting of the larger classes will arrive from New London in a race. The Eastern Yacht Club will devote a day to giving this class some outside racing. The next day open races will be held. The Eastern will start out on the annual cruise to Bar Harbor and the Boston Club will soon follow suit. The first of August the New York Yacht Club is due to arrive and then the sonder-klasse trial will be held off the harbor.

The Atlantic, the schooner yacht which may be called upon to defend the Cape May and Brenton Reef cups, the property of Francis Skinner, is being put in commission in the harbor.

JIG STONE GOT DRAW

NEW HAVEN, Ct., May 15.—Jig Stone of Boston fought a fierce twelve-round draw with Tommy Connelly of New York. Both fought to a standstill. In the last round Stone had slightly the better of it on points, but Connelly made a hot rally at the finish.

PAT DOUGHERTY IS SIGNED BY OUTLAW CLUB

Special to the Boston American.

LANCASTER, Pa., May 15.—Pat Dougherty, who it was reported had straightened out his difficulties with the management of the New York Americans, has signed to play with the Lancaster team of the Tri-State League and has already left for Williamsport to join that aggregation. The locals were badly in need of another good outfielder, and it is believed that Dougherty will make a good man for them.

A short time ago it was reported that Dougherty refused to play anywhere with the Highlanders because they had cut his salary. It seems that Manager Griffith had promised Dougherty the same figure as last season if he played good ball. "Griff" considered that Dougherty was not doing well enough, so he knifed his money. Pat sulked and quit. Later it was said that Pat had smoothed over matters and that he would leave his home at Bridgeport, Conn., to rejoin his former team mates.

EASTERN LEAGUE RESULTS.

At Rochester—Rochester, 3; Providence, 0.

At Buffalo—Buffalo, 5; Jersey City, 2.

At Montreal—Baltimore, 6; Montreal, 0.

At Toronto—Toronto, 2; Newark, 1.

BEWARE OF THE HIDDEN DANGERS THAT LURK IN THE LOVE LETTER WRITING HABIT

If We Indulge Too Freely We Have to Pay for It

THE LOVE LETTER HABIT HOLDS ITS PRISONER FAST

THE editor of this paper has recently made a heartfelt plea for sensible love letters and love poetry that will stand the test of practical analysis.

He points out that the palpitant verses about "feeding on the lilies of love" and "being consumed by scalding tears," and strolling "through the woods of the heartsick dove," and so on, are mere tommyrot and really mean nothing, and that in point of truth there is no such fowl as a heartsick dove.

Undoubtedly the facts in the case bear out this statement. Furthermore, the youth and maiden who act upon this sage advice will save themselves from much bitter chagrin and regret, for there is no other thing in the whole catalogue of our follies that we would not sooner confront than our old love letters.

Nevertheless, it is hopeless to expect that there is ever going to be any reform in this matter.

When people are in love they are possessed by an irresistible yearning to simply wallow in high-flown sentiment and mixed metaphors.

It is a symptom of the disease. Every day language ceases to be good enough. They are bound to have expressions with lace frills and crocheted edges in which to express their feelings.

The man who is so plain, and blunt, and terse ordinarily in his communications that he can give an order to his broker for engineering a corner in wheat in six typewritten lines, and who would as soon think of going down the street with a pink sash around his waist and a wreath of flowers about his hat as to waste space in his letters by unnecessary references to roses, and posies, and things, no sooner falls in love than he begins to prate maudlinly about drowning himself in his sweetheart's eyes, and the sun setting at mid-day when she leaves him, and unkissed kisses, and other phenomena that are impossible in nature.

Queer, but True

THE proof of this curious turn that the insanity of love takes is to be found in the imbecile letters that form the backbone of every breach of promise suit.

In these missives sensible men in full possession of their faculties, men who are able to do business, handle large sums of money, speculate in stocks, run factories and stores and engage in the professions and otherwise exhibit every sign of being themselves, do not hesitate to write page after page of highfalutin nonsense, full of hyperbole, and the most asinine terms of endearment and references to the lady loves and themselves.

"My lovey dovey." "My ownest own." "Violet eyes." "I send you a billion kisses." "I live only in your presence." "It is a million years since last night," are mild and innocuous statements in these missives.

Nor does veracity and appropriateness cut any figure in them.

It is nothing uncommon for the writer to address the party of the first part as "my little girl," though she is forty years old, and weighs one hundred and eighty, nor does he refrain from signing himself "Your Little Boy Blue," even though he is as bald as a billiard ball and has grown up grandchildren.

And women are as pleased to get these imbecile letters as the men are to write them. Nay, more. If a woman didn't get them, she would feel that she was defrauded out of her rights.

No sensible love letter for hers.

She wants to be wooed in a very frenzy of poetic terms, and between the man who gives her a plain businesslike option on his hand and heart, and the one who indites epistles to her in which he tells her that her voice is red roses, and her eyes stars of night, and that he climbed on the moonbeams to her, the gentleman who frothed at the mouth will get her every time.

Like to Be Poets

THE truth is that there is something in love that makes everybody want to "drop into poetry," as the immortal Mr. Wegg said. There is also at the bottom of every heart an unacknowledged hankering to write poetry.

The fear of the jibes and jeers of our friends and acquaintances keeps most of us from attempting this in cold blood, but the love letter gives us the opportunity for which we have been secretly pining all our lives.

It is, we fondly and fallaciously believe, only to be seen by one, and so we cast prudence to the winds, and let ourselves go.

We indulge in a sentimental orgy. We grow drunk on our own eloquence, and the burning words of passion we pen, the farfetched poetical allusions in which we indulge and the similes we cripple by the way form one of the things we blush to remember as long as we live.

That is the reason that when lovers quarrel they always ask for the return of their letters. Nobody could rest easy in bed if they knew that such an awful record was out against them.

In spite of all this foolish love letters will never be superseded by the sensible one. There is just once in a lifetime that we get a chance to slosh over with sentiment and poetic rhapsodies without being laughed at, and the privilege is too precious. We are not going to voluntarily abridge it.

More than that, the language of love is the language of exaggeration, and if a man should tell a woman in plain, practical terms that he loved her and was willing to work for her, instead of swearing that he worshipped her and that he would commit suicide if she failed to smile upon him, she would consider it such a lukewarm expression of regard that she would not consider it worthy of consideration.

We have established an inflated standard of values in love making and we have to pay the price. We have to leave ourselves margin to scale it down.

Hence the burning love letter and the necessity of "scalding tears" and "loving beyond the grave," etc., etc., in a billet doux that comes up to stade.

UNIQUE FACTS ABOUT WOMEN

ONE of the most extravagant of woman's fads on record was that of a Frenchwoman, the Marquise de la Roche-Fonteille, who, it is said, had her bed decorated with orchids. These were changed three times a week, at a weekly cost of nearly $1,000.

• • •

La Belle Otero, the famous continental dancer, takes no chances of loss through the twisting of an ankle, as each of her feet is insured for $10,000.

• • •

The woman who possesses the longest head of hair in the world is said to be Mercedes Lopez, a Mexican. Her height is five feet, and when she stands erect her hair trails on the ground four feet eight inches. The hair is so thick that she can completely hide herself in it. She has it cut very frequently, as it grows so quickly, enabling her to sell large tresses to hair dealers every month. She is the wife of a poor sheep herder.

• • •

The colony of Victoria in Australia is still so youthful that the first white woman who set foot upon its soil died only recently. She was born in England in 1816, and went to western Australia, where she married, and afterward moved to Victoria. Her son was the first white native of that colony.

• • •

There is now in a refuge for the aged in Madrid a woman who may probably claim to be the oldest member of her sex in the world. She is an Andalusian, and was born at Grenada in 1781. Her name is Maria Nieto y Santos. She has lived in Madrid for 103 years, and has been the mother of twenty-one children, all of whom are dead, though most of them lived to a fairly old age.

It's a Short Step from Exaggeration to Actual Lying

By Beatrice Fairfax

EXAGGERATION is simply a dressy form of untruthfulness.

Very often as much harm is done by exaggerating a fact as by actually telling an untruth.

It is all a matter of habit and can be cured if one takes the trouble to try hard enough.

The trouble is that with some people the cold fact never seems big enough, they must enlarge on it.

Hundreds become thousands, inches become yards under this skilful manipulation. They feel that they cannot impress people unless they can make a big story.

In reality, people soon grow to place no reliance on the stories told by the exaggerator.

They know that if he tells them he just saw a crowd of thousands of people it was really only a crowd of a few hundreds.

If he tells them he has met a perfectly beautiful girl they know she is moderately pretty, and so forth.

His stories are of no value, because they cannot be relied on.

There is no characteristic more contemptible than that of telling untruths.

A small lie is just as bad as a big one. Some people seem constitutionally unable to tell the truth. They lie on all occasions, even when they have nothing to gain by it.

One reason for this is that they cannot bear to appear not to know everything. No matter what you tell them, they will have had similar experiences.

They boast of knowing people whom they have never met.

They tell marvellous tales of experiences they have never gone through.

And they never seem to imagine that there is a limit to the credulity of their listeners.

Don't get into the habit of telling petty untruths. It is a horrid habit and can't help but have its effect on your character.

Don't go about thrusting unpleasant truths upon your friends before you are asked your opinions, but when you are asked tell the truth.

If you are given to exaggeration, try and cure yourself. Learn to give plain facts without distortion.

It is a fine thing to establish a reputation for truthfulness and reliability.

Don't for a moment imagine that because it harms no one a lie is excusable. It harms you, even if no one else is affected by it.

One little lie can work up a great tangle of deceit. It grows like a snowball and the first thing you know you are fathoms deep in deception.

Stick to the truth in big and little things, and remember that "a lie that is half a truth is ever the blackest of lies."

DOES HIGHER EDUCATION PRODUCE OLD MAIDS?

Is Too Much Knowledge Unfitting Our Girls to Become Good Wives and Sensible Mothers?

By Arletta Burroughs

IS it true that education is making old maids?

Dr. William L. Felter, principal of the Girls' High School of Brooklyn, claims that it is. He argues that a complete reform must be made as to the higher education of girls if the world is to be made permanently better through them.

He holds that the purpose of education is not to give to the world woman musicians, artists and authors; that business and professional women are not needed. He believes that the kind of woman most needed is the one "with even greater potentialities, with even richer opportunities for blessing the race and of making the circle of her life radiant with helpful and benign influences—she is a wife and mother."

Dr. Felter seems to bemoan the fact that higher education keeps some women from marrying. While this is true in some cases, it certainly is not so much to be bewailed as would seem at first thought. Better that one woman should shirk her duty to posterity than that thousands should half way perform theirs.

The Child's Right

IT is well said that a child has a right to be well born. If this is true, does it not follow that the more cultivated the mind of the mother the more worth living will be her children? Who ever heard of a man being handicapped by the fact that his mother was a well educated woman?

Is it possible to educate too highly the human brain, be it male or female? Rather is it not desirable to so direct this education that it shall by transmission raise the mental, moral and physical level of the human animal as the generations pass into history?

I fancy the look upon the face of the high school girl to whom any one dare intimate that she could possibly deteriorate to real usefulness in proportion to the amount of higher education she acquired, and every one dreams of marriage as the one goal to be reached.

If the college woman remains unmarried, it is usually from choice, and who shall say that a more desirable state of affairs does not exist where girls are most careful in their choice of husbands.

Self-Made Men

EXAMPLES of self-made men, whose parents were illiterate, and whose struggles in mounting the ladder of success are recorded in history, prove nothing. They succeeded, not because their mothers were illiterate, but in spite of it.

I venture to say that Dr. Felter or any other good American would hesitate long before giving the palm for intelligence to any other nation of men, yet where will you find women with the independence and chances for higher development of the American wife outside of our own land?

They do not seem to me as a rule to have made such bad mothers so far, and it would seem hardly possible for them to suddenly become so just because they have become a little more familiar with the sciences or learned the history of music along with the ability to pound out sounds.

I think it just possible that Dr. Felter has become unnecessarily alarmed. A little advice to the boys as to taking a new start and keeping up with the girls would be more timely.

While Dr. Felter's attack on higher education for girls has caused quite a stir, it will have no effect on things educational for women, you may be sure. The time has gone by when woman will allow herself to be dictated to in such matters.

She has made phenomenal progress along these lines of late years, and she will make still greater strides along the road of learning in the years to come, in spite of those who would place obstacles in her path.

"SHADOWS OF NEW YORK"

CHAPTER XXV.

How to Save Her

AT the Wynter's Molly Haxham's suggestion of moonlight tennis had to be abandoned after one game, because of the lack of the requisite number of players to form a set. Philip Haggard suddenly discovered that it was later than he thought, and that he would have to go at once to catch his train.

Rosamund was not sorry at this abrupt ending to the tennis. She did not like Philip Haggard; there were times, indeed, when she thought that she actually disliked him; and she had been his partner in the game.

"Tennis is stupid, playing two against one," Molly said. "Only it's too fine a night to go indoors. What shall we do?"

"I have an idea," cried Grantham. "Take Herries's boat out on the river—it would be splendid on a night like this—and sing Canadian boat songs—eh, what? You'd go, wouldn't you, Mrs. Gray?" turning to Rosamund's aunt.

"Yes, aunt, you must come," cried Rosamund, readily falling in with the suggestion. "We shan't let you say no!"

Mrs. Gray allowed herself to be persuaded.

"I'll go on ahead and get the boat unfastened," cried Rosamund.

She ran on in front of the others, bareheaded, with the soft wind of the Summer night tangling the loose waves of her hair as she sped lightly over the springy turf. As she ran she glanced through the trees in the direction of the gray old house, and wondered behind which window John Herries was sitting with his friend.

Jack's friend had chosen the right person to appeal to for help in his difficulty, the girl thought with a little smile—Jack would help him if anyone could.

With that thought in her mind Rosamund ran up to the door of the boathouse and swung it open, then paused on the threshold with a little startled exclamation as she saw two figures within, outlined against the moonlit water beyond.

That they were no less embarrassed than herself at this unexpected intrusion she saw. Instantly the girl, whose dark, gypsy-like beauty Rosamund caught a momentary glimpse of as she turned her startled eyes toward the opening door, dropped John Herries's hand, to which she had pressed her lips, and with the instinctive impulse of the hunted moved back into the deeper shadow.

A Queer Meeting

"I beg your pardon," Rosamund said coldly, as she recovered from the shock of her first surprise. "I am afraid I have unintentionally intruded. I thought that the boathouse was empty."

She turned and walked out, shutting the door behind her. It seemed to Rosamund at that moment as though she were shutting the door, too, on all her past friendly intimacy with John Herries, on all the deeper feelings that had been growing up in her thoughts of him. He had told a lie—and to her. This Rosamund told herself passionately as she walked away.

For the moment John Herries had been too much taken aback by the unlooked-for appearance of the girl he loved to utter a word.

The touch of contemptuous coldness in her face and voice told him that she was offended; he realized that Rosamund must inevitably draw a false deduction from the scene she had involuntarily broken in upon, in her ignorance of the circumstances, and of all things in the world he valued her good opinion most.

"Who was that?" whispered Olga, as the door shut behind the girl.

"A friend of mine. You have nothing to fear, of course, but I must follow and speak to her," Herries said hastily.

He opened the door and stepped out into the moonlight to follow her; as he did so, to his utter consternation he saw the figures of two men, as yet some distance away, coming through the trees toward the boathouse.

An exclamation broke from his lips. Instantly it flashed across his mind who the men were. Olga's suspicions that he had been inclined to disregard had been only too well founded. The men she had seen in the village had been police, and they had traced their fugitive here.

What was to be done, he wondered, desperately? Only five minutes more, and they might have been safe; now Olga Vail seemed hopelessly trapped. What was to be done? Was there a chance left? Unless he acted decisively and at once this deeply-wronged girl would fall again into the cruel clutches of the law and be sent back to the grim prison house. Well, he would make a last fight to save her!

In a Trap

The men were still a hundred yards away. Without a moment's loss of time Herries slipped back into the boathouse. To make the situation more desperate, he had no means of fastening the door. It was seldom locked; the key, he remembered, had been left in the pocket of his boating jacket. He shut the door and whispered:

"The police! They are coming this way!"

At the words every vestige of color ebbed out of her face.

"Then I am caught in a trap!" she cried, looking wildly round like some cornered creature seeking a way out. "But they shan't drag me back to prison—they shan't do that!"

And she made a sudden dart forward to the doors that opened on the river.

He divined her mad, desperate impulse, and seized her wrist, bruising the delicate flesh in his grip.

"You mustn't be a fool!" he cried roughly; "you shan't do that! There's a way of escape if only we have a few minutes' respite and you follow my instructions implicitly. I told you I'd save you if I could, and I'm not the man to go back on my promise. Jump into the canoe—you're hidden from their sight there! Quick!"

He saw that after that first moment of panic she had plenty of courage.

"I won't lose my head again!" she whispered, as if replying to the look of doubt in his eyes that questioned her, as he hastily helped her into the canoe. "You may trust me."

"That's right," he whispered, encouragingly, though every nerve in his body was on the rack, for he expected every moment to hear the door of the boathouse flung open whilst the police rushed in. "To the right," he added, in a hoarse whisper, as he tore at the knot of the painter. "It's your only chance. Keep close into the shore. There's a little inlet just yonder where the canoe will be hidden by the thick growth. Keep your head and follow my instructions, and there's a chance yet. You can manage a canoe?"

"Yes."

As she seized the paddle he pushed the canoe off; then raced across to the door and held the handle inside. Let the police try the door now—they should not enter till the canoe was out of sight, he said to himself, with set teeth, his eyes fastened on the girl.

He saw that she had suddenly become quite calm and self-reliant in response to the appeal of her desperate extremity. She dipped the paddle in the water silently and with practiced skill. The next moment she was out of sight around the curve of the lake, and he breathed more freely.

Even yet the police had not tried the boathouse door, so little time had this desperate bid for safety occupied. Herries opened the door and passed out into the open. He saw that the two men had gone up to Rosamund and put a question to her. That fact had given them the respite of a moment or two.

Quick Work

What that question was which the foremost of the two men had put while the other never took his eyes off the door from which Herries was emerging he could not hear, but he caught the answer.

"I do not understand your right to question me," the girl said rather haughtily.

Herries went quickly forward.

"Who are you?" he demanded of the two men in plain clothes. "What are you doing here? I suppose you are aware that these are private grounds?"

"We're from Mulberry street, sir," said the man who had addressed Rosamund, speaking with a sharp military precision, "and we've traced an escaped prisoner to—to these grounds. First, sir, may I ask who you are?"

"I am the owner, John Herries."

"Well, sir, a few minutes ago, as we were coming along the drive to ask your permission to search these grounds, we saw you and a female figure cross the moonlight into that Summer house—there's a break in the trees at one spot through which we could see distinctly. At the distance it looked uncommonly like the person we want—not that we suggest for a moment that you knew her to be an escaped prisoner, of course," added the detective.

TO BE CONTINUED.

Do You Know How to Boil an Egg?

IN many houses the minute glass, with red sand in it, is used as the indicator of the time for egg boiling. When all the sand has run through from the top to the bottom the egg is supposed to be done.

Three minutes is the usual time allowed for boiling an egg. If it is newly laid another minute is allowed. These are the ordinary rules from which some housewives have never departed all the days of their wedded lives.

But these rules are wrong in foundation. Three minutes will not cook an egg. In that time only the outside will be cooked, and that portion overdone, too. Within, the yoke will remain liquid and quite uncooked, though the white will be set too much, especially at its contact with the porous shell.

And longer than three minutes in boiling water will ruin the egg entirely. The yolk will be changed into a substance resembling yellow powder, while the white will be an indigestible mass warranted to help dyspepsia. In fact, a hard-boiled egg, taken with tea, is a very mischievous thing. The tannic acid in the tea will still further harden and toughen the albumen of the egg, so that it will be absolutely insoluble when the digestive juices try to act upon it. It does no good, but has to be passed away as a waste matter.

Of course, if people like the taste of raw yolk, the three minutes in boiling water will give them an egg that can be digested and so turned into flesh later. But what is wanted is a way of cooking that will yield a toothsome, rightly done morsel.

This can be obtained by cooking the egg ten minutes, or, in case of a very new one, warm from the nest, a quarter of an hour.

The water is boiled up before the eggs are put into it. Then it is taken off the fire and the eggs put in for ten minutes. In this way the outer ring of white will not be unduly hardened by boiling, but the hot water will cook the whole egg substance gently. Yolk and white alike will be exactly set, but in no way hardened.

Boiling is the very worst thing for any food composed of albumen. In the case of meat, all cooks know that the outer film of a joint must be hardened so as to coagulate and close up all pores in order to keep the good meat juices within. They consequently harden it by boiling the meat briskly for a minute or two, then they keep the water below boiling point in order to cook the meat through without hardening any albumen beyond the outer film.

Just so is it with an egg. The water must boil to get a good heat, but the actual cooking must be done below that point.

An egg thus cooked is a delicate morsel. An egg cooked by the three-minute system is a delusion.

ANDREW MACK, $85.

BEAUTIFUL BLACK HORSE, Andrew Mack, 7 years old, weighs 1,000 lbs., a perfect model of beauty. Has clean, strong feet and limbs, long flowing mane and tail, as sound as a dollar, very clever and absolutely fearless. He is a natural roadster of 11 miles per hour, and can step mile to light wagon in 2:10; has no official record. He has as many matinee races to his credit as any horse in New England. The only fault with him is the fact that he does not like the elevated cars, but will soon get used to them. Autos, electric cars or any other objects do not bother him in the least. Here is a fine piece of horseflesh for practically nothing for some party who lives outside of Boston or away from the elevated cars. Come and see him. Will be pleased to answer any inquiry either by letter or by "phoning." Phone 21835 Tremont. 120 Dover st. Stable right at foot of stairs of Dover st. elevated station.

$5 DOWN, $1 PER WEEK

The lot of pianos [illegible] will be sold at the Roxbury Storage Salesrooms to settle up unpaid accounts; nearly every standard make on hand, Ivers & Pond, Hallet & Davis, Chickering and Merrill, are in mahogany and walnut cases, 3 pedals and in first-class condition; [illegible] pianos for one; reasons why, expenses in Roxbury hardly noticed, expenses in Boston, $200 to $400 daily; nearly every make to select from; good uprights $40, $50, $60, $65 and $75, squares $10, $15 and $20; why pay more? Several new pianos, the stock of a first-class piano maker gone out of business, which will be sold at a sacrifice; don't fail to call and secure one; greatest chance ever offered; the canvasser, agent and music teacher will tell you to keep away from us; reasons why, we don't pay commissions, you get the benefit in our low prices; see for yourself, examine our large stock.

The gilded piano stores with their costly appointments, their high salaried sales agents, their sellers' commissions, etc., are no place for the economical piano buyer to go. Take the trouble to look around a little, go up where the rents are not as high and buy your piano right.

Why pay $200 more for a piano because it is on a polished floor? See us; nearly every make in stock, at the lowest possible prices and on very easy terms; 10 years' guarantee, stool and scarf with every piano; free delivery everywhere in unmarked wagons; goods guaranteed as represented or money refunded; entrance will be where you see the red flag; sale positive all next week, open Sat. eve. till 9 p. m. ROXBURY STORAGE SALESROOMS, 725 Shawmut av., Roxbury; any Washington st. car to cor. Williams st.

A Comforting Thought About Niagara

Some Day the Huge Waterfall Will Have Passed Its "Industrial Labor" Period Forever

There is public excitement about the "ruining of Niagara Falls." The power of the water which once swept an occasional Indian canoe down to the rapids, and later served as an attractive background for bridal photographs, is now moving street cars in Buffalo, lighting cities miles away, heating offices, etc.

Holes are dug at the top of the falls and the water is made to rush through hidden pipes, turning great wheels at the bottom. This moving power of the water is transformed into heat, light, POWER OF ALL KINDS. But each great wheel, taking its share of the water from the lake, diminishes the amount of water that goes over the falls.

It is clear that, without some kind of interference, we shall have, instead of Niagara Falls, some bare rocks, with a little water trickling over, and a great aggregation of secret tunnels and factories utilizing the power.

The American people are naturally interested in this.

We can give a little cold comfort to those who feel that there is nothing sacred to money.

Undoubtedly industry to-day is more powerful than poetry.

Those that like the rushing waters, the thundering noise, the legends of the mists, will go through the anguish of seeing the falls dwindle down to a few thin streams.

Here comes our comfort.

In days to come the use of Niagara Falls for power will seem childish, almost unbelievable.

You have often seen in the country some old abandoned water-wheel covered with moss and with weeds. And you have been told that that little stream was once used to grind the corn of the neighborhood. The mill has long since been given up. The miller is dead, the wheel is broken down and the stream flows over the obstacle put in its path. It isn't worth while to use that kind of power any more.

Some day it will be the same at Niagara. The pipes will be rusty, the wheels will be neglected, the factories will be in ruins. Nature will have covered them with moss and grass and bushes. The great mass of water from the lake will rush over Niagara Falls, as of old, and the man of that day will say:

"You may not believe it, but not so very long ago there was no water going over the falls to speak of. Men in their primitive efforts used the water power to light cities and move street cars, and they made a very funny row about it, thinking it would last forever.

"They had not then learned to utilize even the power of the tide; they hadn't the most remote idea of using the sun's power directly. They resorted to such makeshifts as water currents, and wheels and pipes, and conducting wires, losing nearly all the force.

"For years the falls were disfigured, the water taken away to turn the trifling little power wheels. But no great harm was done. For as soon as men learned to use nature's real forces, they stopped harnessing the trivial power of waterfalls. The waters went back in their path. And, as a matter of fact, the destruction of the falls was really delayed, since without that temporary diverting of the water that beautiful island in the middle of the river would long since have been washed away and the falls be much farther up the stream from the wearing of the current."

It seems impossible to us now that men should outgrow the use of Niagara. But it is just as certain as anything in this world can be that our excitement about the ruin of the falls will seem an amusing thing some day. The unlimited power of the sun will do all of man's work, and the sight of a harnessed waterfall will seem as strange in a few CENTURIES from now as will the sight of a harnessed horse in a few YEARS from now.

Figures Are Wonderful Things

This Man's Proposition Would Give Him a Sa'ary of Five Million Dollars a Day

Mr. Jacques Bachman writes a question and encloses one cent to pay for the trouble in answering. The question is:

"If a man works thirty days, and he is paid one cent for the first day—the amount being doubled each day—two cents the second day, four cents the third day, eight cents the fourth day, etc., HOW MUCH WILL THE AMOUNT BE ON THE THIRTIETH DAY?"

To oblige Mr. Bachman—and to earn the one-cent stamp which he encloses—we have figured this matter out. It is the old story—the old mathematical problem from the East. In the Eastern form the blacksmith, asked by the ruler to shoe his horse and name his pay, requests one grain of wheat for the first nail, two for the second, and so on up to the thirty-two nails in the horse's shoes. The answer to the question is most encouraging; and we earnestly advise Mr. Bachman to accept the proposition if anybody offers to pay him on this basis of one cent a day, doubling for thirty days.

On the thirtieth day, as Mr. Bachman may learn by a simple multiplying by two, HE WOULD EARN $5,368,709.12—very good pay for a good day's work.

The twenty-ninth day would give him something over two million six hundred thousand dollars, the twenty-eighth day something over one million three hundred thousand, and so on. It is perhaps wrong to print this, as it may make the gas people, the Standard Oil people and the others feel sad and sorry. In their wildest moments they never dreamt of such a good plan as this.

Their consolation must be that, while it is impossible for them to utilize Mr. Bachman's modernized idea, they can find comfort in the thought that even if they did manage to put the screws on the people in this edifying multiplication fashion, they couldn't get the money, as there wouldn't be enough in the world to pay it.

AS A MATTER OF FACT, IF MR. JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER AND HIS PIOUS SON KEEP THE THOUSAND MILLIONS WHICH THEY OWN TO-DAY AND MANAGE TO PILE IT UP AT THE RATE OF FOUR PER CENT. COMPOUNDED IN THE HANDS OF THEIR DESCENDANTS FOR A HUNDRED YEARS MORE, THERE WON'T BE ENOUGH MONEY IN ALL THE UNITED STATES, OR OUTSIDE OF IT, TO PAY THEM WHAT WILL BE OWING THEM THEN.

How to Down the Ice Trust

By Rev. Thomas B. Gregory

MAN may have been produced by Nature, but, now that he is produced, he is much greater than Nature.

After thousands, perhaps millions, of years of "evoluting," Nature has finally evoluted a creature that is much wiser than herself, and that in his cunning improves upon her in many ways.

As proof of the truth of this statement witness the Refrigerator, the annihilator of climate, the arrangement by which Summer's heat is neutralized, and the crisp air of December is made to prevail midst the sultry heat of July.

The inventor of the first Ice Machine was a Frenchman named Carre. Carre brought out his invention in this country in the year 1860, thus founding the so-called "Ammonia Absorption Process."

In this process a solution of aqueous ammonia is employed, being first generated as a gas, then condensed, and then allowed to expand and absorb the heat.

Ammonia boils at the low temperature of 28 1-2 F. It is, therefore, very easy to convert it from the liquid form into a gas, and this change raises the pressure of the ammonia very materially; then by leading the ammonia through pipes that are kept cold by flowing cold water the ammonia can be again condensed.

There is also the "Compression" system, which has proven itself to be more convenient if not more practicable than the Absorption process.

In this ammonia is allowed to expand into a gas, and is subjected to pressure by means of a steam pump. This compression increases the heat of the ammonia gas, and then by passing the ammonia through coils of pipe and making it cold again, the ammonia is reduced to the condition where it seeks to regain its heat.

By allowing it to expand in pipes that surround a tank of water the ammonia reduces the temperature of the water in its effort to regain its lost heat, and by continuing the process the water in the tank is finally brought below a temperature of thirty degrees and becomes ice.

And thus it comes about that by the help of a little coal and water and ammonia we can make Winter in the midst of Summer, and preserve fruits, vegetables, meats and such other things as would perish in the Summer heat.

The refrigerator thus brings all climates to our doors—no matter where those doors may be.

Thanks to the idea started by Carre, New Yorkers, Chicagoans, Parisians or any other people can sit solidly at home if they have the money and command that the richest meats and daintiest fruits of all the lands of the earth be delivered to them perfectly sweet and fresh—and it shall be done!

Says a high authority: Cream from a famous dairy is sent to particular patrons in Paris, and it is known that in one instance, at least, a bottle of cream, having failed to reach the person to whom it was consigned, made the return transatlantic voyage and was received in New York three weeks after its first departure, perfectly sweet and good!"

It is only a question of time when every house, church, theatre and other places where human beings assemble will have the benefit of Carre's idea, and, like Othello, the tyrannus Ice Trust will have lost its occupation.

The Benefit Game

By Wex Jones

THE captain of the Topsies' team had slipped and sprained his knee,
And that, of course, as he remarked, meant "Business, Twenty-three!"
For there's very little doing when the baseball extra's out,
With a dozen nippy rivals and a leg that hurts like gout.
So Red Patsy called a meeting, and his Terrors to a man
Decided that a benefit was about the proper plan.
An exhibition game was fixed, at which to pass the hat,
And the envied job of treasurer assigned to Mose the Rat.

NO bigger crowd was ever seen at any newsboy game;
From even two whole blocks away the yelling rooters came;
The grandstand was a packing-case, and here two magnates proud,
At the cost of one good cent a head, looked down upon the crowd
Which jammed the curbstone bleachers; so the cop came up to see,
But wouldn't spoil a benefit, and even gave a "V."
(A nickel one, of course, you know), and the proceeds, counting that,
Were exactly thirteen pennies, in the mitt of Mose the Rat.

THE Terrors played like Giants, and the Topsies were no dubs,
Although these non-league games can't change the standing of the clubs;
So the fans were greatly tickled when the Holy Terrors won,
And not a soul regretted the good deed he had done.
Then the cry arose for Patsy to present the golden hat,
And he stepped upon the grandstand and called for Mose the Rat—
When screeched a racing urchin—puffing messenger of Fate—
"Mose is at de ice cream push-cart——eaten'——up——his——thirteenth——plate!"
